BORAH BACKS ROOSEVELT'S 'TAX-THE-RICH' PROGRAM AS SENTIMENT GROWS FOR ACTION THIS SESSION

ATLANTAN WAGES UPHILL BATTLE IN 5-SET MATCH

Challenger Falls Before Deadly Rally in Spectacular Performance on Chicago Courts Before Cheering Spectators.

"BITSY" SCORES, 6-0, IN DECIDING SET

Becomes First Star Since Filden To Capture Clay Courts Singles Crown for Third Time.

CHICAGO, June 23.—(P)—There he stands, a mere mite of a man only five feet four and scaling but 124 pounds in his fighting togs, but there he is—Bryan "Betsy" Grant, master of the clay courts.

The only player in the world today to seriously challenge his right to such far-flung fame in clay court tennis competition, 18-year-old Frank Parker, of Milwaukee, got his chance in the national finals on the River Forest Club No. 1 court today and failed like all the rest, falling before a deadly rally that brought the little Atlanta victory after five sets before 2,500 cheering spectators. The score was 4-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-0.

Grant's victory not only gave him the national clay courts singles crown for the third time, but made him the only man to hold the "Big Bill" Filden, six times holder of the same title in his hey-day, to win it more than twice. His love finish was the most decisive in the tournament's history. It also marked his third successive triumph over Parker, fourth-ranking national star, of the clay courts.

OFFERS HARD FIGHT. No credit can be taken away from the stoical "Polish" boy from Milwaukee, now prepping for Princeton. Parker gave the tiny master a hard fight for three sets and while it occasionally appeared that "Betsy" was playing possum, did better than the galleries really expected him to do. The entire result was founded on Betsy's strategic fight to play to Parker's weakness—his forehand. He failed to do so very successfully until the fourth set, but then he did it. He piled up point after point and win eased.

Bomb Rocks Embassy Of U. S. in Mexico City

MEXICO, D. F., June 23.—(P)—A bomb apparently made of several sticks of dynamite and caps exploded early today in the patio of the United States embassy, making a hole about 9 inches deep and breaking several windows, including one in the private office of Ambassador Josephus Daniels.

The ambassador called all foreign correspondents to his office tonight and informed them of the incident, which he described as "a matter which has no importance."

Daniels declined to inform local authorities of the bombing and refused to make a complaint. A policeman on duty at the embassy, however, recovered fragments of the missile and reported the explosion to police headquarters. The matter then was taken up with the foreign office. No one was hurt.

White Sees Approval for Ballot On Retention of Daylight Time

City Council Will Be Asked To Allow People To Vote On Proposal of Acting Mayor Gilliam; Haire Says Opposition to Referendum Is Slight.

Councilman approval of Acting Mayor Ed A. Gilliam's proposal to allow the people of Atlanta to vote on whether they wish to preserve the advantage of daylight saving time during the winter months was predicted yesterday by Councilman John A. White.

White said he would ask the council group which had decided to attempt to retain daylight saving benefits, to join the Gilliam move, and other members of the council also were expected to support the movement.

Councilman Howard Haire, ninth ward, asserted he would support the measure, and there appeared little likelihood that any concerted opposition will develop to the referendum. The Gilliam plan calls for setting the referendum on the same day on which Atlantans will be asked to pass on whether they wish to float bonds to take advantage of federal government offers to supplement the local issue by large amounts.

"I think the time measure is one of such wide variance of opinion that the people should pass upon it again," White asserted. "I want to take this opportunity to say that I will abide by the results of the referendum, and am confident to say that council will be pleased to get a full and complete expression of voters on so controversial an issue."

"Citizens of this city should have the right to determine just what time they want to live under, and I propose to support the movement."

"There can be no foundation for any charge of a breach of faith with the citizens of Atlanta in seeking a new expression of voters on the move to keep daylight saving time advantages for Atlantans throughout the year," Haire said. "In fact, it appears to me to be a fine way to determine what council should do about it."

"Council should keep the fast time if the people want it. If they do not, council should change the clocks back when the regular daylight saving time limit expires."

GANG SEIZED NEAR JOE LOUIS' CAMP

Thugs Suspected of Plotting Kidnaping Captured Without a Shot.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, N. J., June 23.—(UP)—Moving with swift precision, police, armed with machine guns, today rounded up a gang of suspected murderers, safe-crackers and hi-jackers as they slept in a summer camp "fortress" near Joe Louis' training camp.

New York detectives admitted they were investigating the possibility that the nine prisoners were plotting to kidnap the negro pugilist, who meets Prim Carners Tuesday.

One of the bungalows in which seven of the gangsters were trapped contained enough artillery and ordnance to terrorize a town.

The gang's equipment included nine revolvers, a high-powered rifle, a tear gas gun, and a number of tear gas bombs, a quantity of nitroglycerine, and a complete set of safe-cracking tools.

Two of the hoodlums reached under their pillows for guns as the 20 police swiftly made them captive, but they were speedily disarmed.

Other police officers surrounded the cottage with machine guns to forestall escape and police riflemen were posted also on the opposite bank of the Pequannock river, which the cottage fronts, ready to open fire if the gangsters made a break.

The one of the raid is about five miles from Louis' Pompton Lakes training camp, where the Detroit heavyweight is preparing for his battle with the gigantic Italian.

In a second bungalow about 100 feet away the raiders seized a man and woman, who said they were George Mawald, 32, and his wife, Edna, 25. With the other seven captives, they were rushed to Pompton Lakes jail and held as public enemies under the new state statute.

Of the seven men nabbed in the "arsenal" cottage, all but one had long criminal records ranging from larceny to murder.

Parked outside the bungalow was a truck which police said had been used in a recent New York fur robbery. Detective Sergeant Devine, of the

HOUSE BODY BUCKS F. D. R. ON LIQUOR

Will Insist on Barrels, Keg Sales Despite Warning of Chaos.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—Word was said today to be waiting for President Roosevelt today that whether he "likes it or not," a house ways and means subcommittee is insistent upon permitting the sale of liquor in kegs and barrels as well as in bottles.

The differences with the administration were caused by attempts to draft a bill replacing the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, doomed to death with the supreme court ruling on NRA.

Under treasury regulations, sale of liquor in anything but bottles was barred. Secretary Morgenthau and Joseph H. Choate Jr., chairman of the old FACA, sought to let those regulations stay in effect as well as to create a new, independent agency known as "The Federal Alcohol Control Commission."

Democrats on the house ways and means committee demurred. They re-wrote the proposed bill to permit barrel sales and put alcohol control under the treasury.

Then Secretary Morgenthau—who had an opportunity but did not appear before the committee during its hearings on the new bill—told newsmen that it would take an "army" to enforce liquor laws if barrel sales were permitted.

He added that the President agreed with him. And he said, too, that alcohol control ought to be under a separate agency.

Committee members were obviously irritated at Morgenthau's press conference discussion. So the subcommittee resumed work on the bill in secret session.

First, it approved the ban against treasury regulations forbidding liquor sales in kegs and barrels. Then it voted to put the control agency under the treasury. And next, as one committee member—who asked that his name be withheld—put it:

"We had Choate in and told him what we had done. And we told him that we were going to insist that they permit liquor to be sold in barrels."

"He said he figured we would feel that way, but that we were going to get licked in the senate. And we told him that if he thought that, he was in for a big surprise."

F.D.R. Threatens Veto Of TVA Amendments

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(UP)—President Roosevelt will veto the compromise TVA amendments if they come to the White House loaded with concessions to utility interests as approved by the house military affairs committee, it was learned in congressional circles tonight.

At the same time he was reported to be standing firm in his refusal to accept, without a fight, a provision in the house draft of the Wheeler-Rayburn utilities holding company bill calling for regulation instead of elimination as approved by the senate.

The TVA compromise was forced out of the military affairs committee Friday after four democrats had joined with republicans to snarl the measure in a six-week deadlock.

SEC INVESTIGATOR NABBED BY 'G-MEN' FOR TAKING BRIBE

Agents Listened In On 'Deal', Planted Money and Caught Him Red-Handed.

SCARSDALE, N. Y., June 23.—(UP)—William A. Raybell, investigator for the Federal Securities Exchange Commission until 10 days ago, today was trapped by "G-men" in the act of collecting payment on what officers said was a $27,000 bribe.

He was receiving $2500 payment from J. Edward Jones, a dealer in oil royalties, ostensibly to "square a case" against Jones pending by the commission.

Raybell was discharged 10 days ago by the SEC for "general incompetence." Judge John J. Burns, general counsel for the commission, hastened to announce, following his seizure.

Oil Man F. D. R. Foe. Jones has been prominent for his attacks on the Roosevelt administration and particularly Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes for alleged "persecution" of the oil man for his opposition to administration policies in the securities field.

Raybell, according to Lieutenant Arthur Carney, of the Scarpsdale police, was taken to New York by agents of the United States Department of Justice, for questioning yesterday.

The arrest today was achieved at Jones' home by "G-men" accompanied by Judge Burns, Lieutenant Carney, Assistant District Attorney William Horan, of Westchester county, and United States Attorney Charles T. Murphy.

They asserted Raybell was accepting the bribe to influence his testimony or to absent himself entirely from the pending trial against Jones, charged with the sale of securities without listing them as required under the securities act.

Raybell, said Jones, recently approached him and offered to "square" the case "for a price." The offer, officials revealed tonight, was made

NOTED ENGINEERS GATHER FOR MEET

Georgia Tech Host To Four-Day Convention of National Society.

With captains of industry, personnel officers of many of the largest manufacturing plants in the nation and noted engineers in attendance, delegates to the annual meeting of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education will convene at Georgia Tech today for a four-day session.

The present session marks the first time the organization has ever met in Atlanta and is the second society meeting to be held in the south.

Members of the society arrived here from an inspection of the Norris dam, near Knoxville, Saturday, where they held a joint session with the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and inspection of TVA work in that area.

Morning sessions today will get underway at 9:30 o'clock in various class rooms at Tech and will be devoted to specialized discussions of various engineering branches. The southern eastern section of the society will convene at 11 o'clock in Room 105 of the main building and at noon the society

Ickes Bitterly Flays Talmadge In Review of Georgia Incident

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, was singled out by Secretary Ickes today in his book, "Back to Work," as one reason for "caution," in approving public works projects.

Renewing his attack on Talmadge for vetoing a bill which would have validated state highway certificates as collateral for PWA projects, Ickes said:

"While we have had no similar experience with any other public official, even below the grade of governor, this illuminating incident will serve to justify the caution that we felt it was necessary to exercise in many instances in approving projects when we were asked to rely upon the promises of public officials instead of upon statutory authority."

Talmadge, a frequent critic of the Roosevelt administration, was accused by Ickes last week of breaking an "implied" promise by signing a bill taking away security for a $2,001,500

ANTI-BRITISH TIE OF FRANCE, ITALY IS FACED BY EDEN

Envoy Is Coolly Received at Rome Where He Seeks To Placate Duce for Nazi Pact.

ROME, June 23.—(P)—Great Britain's roving diplomat, Captain Anthony Eden, arrived tonight in Rome, faced with a united Italo-French front in opposition to Britain's methods of obtaining a naval agreement with Germany.

His welcome was cool. Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary for foreign affairs, went to the station to meet him, but there was no demonstration such as usually accompanies a statesman's arrival, and the customary top hats were missing.

Shortly before Eden got here from Paris, talks, Suvich received Count Charles De Chambrun, the French ambassador, who had just returned from Paris. Suvich, it was understood, told him the Italian viewpoint on England's accord allowing Germany to build up to 35 per cent of her naval strength was identical with that of France.

Pact Strengthens Italy. Both governments object to the unilateral manner in which London reached an agreement without taking into consideration the opinions of France and Italy. This fact, it was believed, will be stated to Eden by Premier Mussolini in an uncertain terms when they meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Venezia palace for their first conversations.

Despite Italy's objections to the way England concluded the German naval agreement, she admits, nevertheless, that she draws much advantage from it.

Popolo Di Roma in a front page article examining the accord said Italy and Japan obtain benefits from it, explaining:

"If Germany constructs a powerful fleet, which naturally will be all concentrated in the North sea, then France and England will have to withdraw a more or less important part of their fleet from the Mediterranean."

NEW PEACE MEET IS SET FOR COAL

Guffey Bill Faces Renewed Opposition; Parley Opens Today.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—New complications were added to the muddled soft coal labor situation today on the eve of renewed negotiations toward wage and hour contracts for the miners.

Enactment of the Guffey coal stabilization bill this week appeared probable. A ways and means subcommittee still has upwards of 25 witnesses to hear when it resumes hearings Tuesday on the measure to set up a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry.

Senator Guffey, democrat, Pennsylvania, said he would not call up the bill before the house approved it.

Even though the opposition of the bill predicted its passage on President Roosevelt's "must" list would indirectly be its enactment, they said they would block it by effect of court tests of its constitutionality.

Nevertheless, Appalachian operators and the United Mine Workers will renew their parleys tomorrow on congressional floor.

U. S. Seeks Early Date For Mrs. Waley Trial

TACOMA, Wash., June 23.—(P)—An early trial, possibly starting as early as Tuesday, was sought by the government today for 19-year-old Mrs. Margaret Thulin Waley, who was prevented from pleading guilty to Weyerhaeuser kidnapping charge.

With her 24-year-old husband, Harmon, starting his 45-year sentence in McNeil Island federal prison, the girl wife waited the coming of attorneys to represent her at tomorrow's hearing before Federal Judge E. E. Cushman in which the trial date is to be fixed.

John P. Dore, former mayor of Seattle, and Stephen J. O'Brien, Dore's assistant, named by Judge Cushman to represent Mrs. Waley, were expected to visit her in her jail cell.

MILLION IS SOUGHT FOR LIQUOR CHECK

Treasury Would Intensify Drive Against Illicit Dealers With Fund.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—A nationwide check of retail liquor dealers in a drive against repeat bootlegging was proposed by the treasury today in a request for $1,086,941 of work-relief money.

If the cash is allotted, the treasury said its alcohol tax unit would investigate the liquor trade in four-score cities with populations of 100,000 or more, including the national capital.

It added:

"A test program of making a house-to-house canvass, in certain collection districts, has furnished evidence that certain dealers are being used as outlets for the tax-unpaid products of bootleggers, and that the illicit operation of the post-prohibition period, due to the activities of organized bootleggers, are totally different from those encountered by collectors of internal revenue prior to prohibition."

Atlanta would be allocated $10,723 for investigation of illicit liquor trade in Georgia under the terms of the proposal.

Meanwhile, works progress administration officials made final checks of other applications for part of the $300,000,000 that is to be used to employ the "white collar" relief class.

Funds for 2,500 engineers and draughtsmen to aid in completing a topographical map of the United States have been tentatively approved, they said. Other projects likely to be carried out include $65,000,000 to provide part-time jobs for 20,000 youngsters between 18 and 24 and undetermined amounts for compiling a guide to the nation's historical and recreational facilities.

These would be under the direction of other federal agencies, they said, but a substantial number, notably those providing employment for actors, musicians and artists, will be directed by local works progress administrators.

Ministry surveys to collect information for studies of the nation's economic life were planned to provide work for young college graduates and others with little or no work experience. Others likely will be given jobs directing playground activities, while unskilled clerical and servant classes will supplement local works progress staffs.

No plans will be completed, officials said, until a survey of the kind of work these on relief can do is completed, probably by July 1.

ATTACKER FACES DEMAND OF DEATH

Admitting Assault of 17, Slaying of One, He Is Hidden From Public.

PEORIA, Ill., June 23.—(P)—Still wary of smouldering public resentment, authorities continued today to hide Gerald Thompson, 25, in an undisclosed jail as the assembled evidence to support a demand for death penalty retribution in the brutal slaying of pretty Mildred Hallmark.

State's Attorney E. V. Champion, of Peoria county, completed preliminary for a hastily summoned re-convening of the grand jury Tuesday. He said with Thompson's alleged confession of the attack and slaying of the 19-year-old girl available, a murder indictment could be voted late today.

The prosecutor asserted every effort would be made to give the young tool-maker a speedy and fair trial, but he declined to divulge in what lockup Thompson was incarcerated.

"I'm taking no chances," Champion said. "The Peoria citizenry is naturally resentful and we feel it is better for all concerned to keep the slayer's whereabouts hidden at this time."

The state's attorney said he would release Julian Baxter, 24, amateur photographer friend of Thompson. Baxter was taken into custody yesterday after it was learned Thompson had photographed some of the young woman's nude body as he admitted attacking.

"We are satisfied Baxter had nothing to do with the Hallmark case," Champion said.

Authorities termed Thompson "sex-mad" and asserted that in addition to his confession to police in the Hallmark case, a diary kept by him listed 16 other assaults. Champion did not plan to subpoena other alleged victims.

Mildred's nearly nude body was found last Monday in a creek in Springfield cemetery. She had suffered a broken neck.

DEFINITE WISHES FROM PRESIDENT TO BE DEMANDED

Idaho Republican Issues Statement as Part of Move by Liberal Republicans To Force F. D. R. Into Open on Issue.

PROGRAM TERMED GOOD ECONOMICS

Democratic Leaders Will Consult With Chief Executive on His Return From Hyde Park.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—Senator Borah today hailed President Roosevelt's new tax plan as a "share-the-burden-of-government" program and gave his powerful support to a "timely" tax adjustment "in the light of our stupendous expenditures."

The Idaho republican issued his formal statement as a part of today's determination of liberal republicans and some democrats to force President Roosevelt into the open on whether he wants the new levies imposed at this session of congress. Borah said:

"This program ought to be considered as a just and timely readjustment of our tax laws in the light of our stupendous expenditures."

Borah's statement said it was "absurd" to call the proposal either a "share-the-wealth" or "tax-the-rich" program. He called it sound "economically" and "in morals," and added it would be "more conducive to recovery" than "reckless voting of bonds" to pass on the cost of future generations.

As a leading congressional critic of the New Deal, the Idaho G. O. P. independent has favored the republican banner more closely than other western liberals. His stand today preaged a showdown with the administration on whether it was a question on the President's proposal before adjournment.

Critical of "waste," and "extravagance," Borah said "there is nothing more conducive to waste, to extravagance, and to economic demoralization than the unconscionable system of passing expenditures over to our children, and our children's children in the way of bonds and interest."

Confers With Group. Borah, meanwhile, conferred with members of the group urging action at this session.

They determined to hammer on the

Coalition Government Sought in Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, June 23.—(P)—Mila Stoyadinovich, finance minister in the fallen cabinet of Premier Boguljub Tzvetich, was commissioned today by the regency to form a new government.

Stoyadinovich is expected to form a new ministry which gives representation to the opposition of the Tzvetich regime.

It was not expected that Dr. Vladko Machek, leader of the Croats, will take a portfolio, but Prince Paul, the chief regent, has obtained a promise of Croat co-operation.

As soon as Stoyadinovich was notified of his commission he called leaders of all factions into conference.

'29 SPECULATION BOOM LAID TO RESERVE BOARD

N. Y. Agency Criticized,
Lack of Power Cited as Reason for Crash.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(UP)—Lack of Federal Reserve Board power to dictate credit policies during the speculative boom of 1927 to 1929 reflected to the detriment of the country, Adolph C. Miller, member of the board, inferred tonight.

Miller's statement, giving details of the long period of discussion with the Federal Reserve System over methods to control the boom which preceded the present depression, was calculated to spur passage of the Federal Reserve bill. This bill is designed to increase board powers, place it in control of credit policies, and make it responsible for them.

Simultaneously the American Liberty League asked that the controversial section of the bill strengthening the reserve board power be dropped until another session, after further careful study of the entire banking and monetary problem.

The league held that the "central bank" section of the bill increases the authority of political officers of the government over the Federal Reserve System in such a way as to furnish a potential menace to the integrity of our credit and monetary systems.

There is no pressing need for the section, the league asserted, and its enactment "might seriously retard recovery."

Miller, however, saw great significance in the reserve board's lack of power during the boom. He blamed the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for helping to promote speculation.

All Walks of Life Are Represented Among Colonists at Matanuska

College-Bred Drifters, Former Executives, Painters,
Preachers Form Rare Combination; Outfit
Has Daily "Newspaper."

By ARVILLE SCHALEBEN.
(Copyright, 1935, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
PALMER, Alaska, June 23.—Who's building an empire, if one is being built?

Colonists taken from relief rolls of states include college-bred drifters, preachers and priests, traveling printers and traveling painters, butchers, bakers and troublemakers. Tested executives, yes, but also executives who but a year ago were "on their uppers."

In our Matanuska valley colony of some 1,500 population there are men from every state, from the strange corners of the earth. There is even a man named Port Said, although he's never been there.

Max H. Sherrod and his wife, both registered nurses, heard about the rural rehabilitation here, loaded their daughter, Janet, 3, in the family car and started for Seattle from Battle Creek, Mich.

"We were lucky," Sherrod says. "We got a job on the North Star, nursing the sick kids who'd been left behind when the Wisconsin and Michigan families sailed on the St. Michel. Then we came on to Palmer. We just had a tent and a little baggage. But Irwin (the colonization director) says we can have a little land and work part time at nursing."

Group Has Newspaper.
A man named "Shorty" blew in with only a barrel on his back and nothing in his pocket. He says he's a newspaper man, and he wants to start a weekly—mimeographed at first and printed after a while. Now he's working in the commissary at $100 a month. A preacher beat him to the newspaper business.

The Rev. E. L. Bingle, educated at Naperville, Ill., in an evangelical seminary, dipped into Alaska seven years ago. Before he came here he was telling the good people of Cordova about the Lord.

"Why did I come to Palmer?" he says, repeating your question. "Reckless, that's it—a reckless rascal, and a reckless rascal is a hard hitting fellow. If it wasn't for reckless men there'd be no pioneering. I just got to be moving around."

Short and round, with a heavy head, Bingle can't be distinguished from a colonist. He dresses like them, works with them, and even occasionally swears with them. He came into the valley with the first arrivals, pitched a tiny tent for his wife and two children and in a matter of days was getting out a newspaper.

"These people, just away from home, get pretty lonesome," he explains. "That little paper I get out keeps them in touch with the outside so the change isn't so abrupt."

Bingle gets news over his radio and each morning posts a yellow typewritten page or two on the camp bulletin boards. He profits not a penny from the Palmer Daily.

Also keeping the colonists in touch with the Lord is Merrill Sulzman. A young priest out of Manhattan by way of Seward, the colonists call him "regular." Much of the time when he goes among them he takes off his clerical collar.

Two Per Cent College Men.

No outfit on the project embraces more characters than the construction crew, gathered from the transient camps of California and working under the supervision of the state.

In its tents sleep men in their early thirties who've sailed the seven seas and seen the world at its weirdest. They talk in dialects from Kentucky, Texas, New York's East Side, the middle west, Florida and the Ozarks of Missouri.

Two per cent of the crew are college educated. Somehow they went "haywire," drifted into some California transient camp and enrolled for this Alaskan adventure. Black moods they curse the fate that sent them down here among the mosquitoes. But they work, and there have been few deserters. Some of them take Bingle at his word when he says, "Boys, you're making history."

Nicknames tell a story. In the camps we've got "Oklahoma Slim" and "Oklahoma Jack" (who's fresh from the dust storm but still in the "farm"), "Montana Moore," "Muddy Mississippi," "Tex," "Pawnee Bill," "Buttercup," "The Duke," "Heavy," "Jersey," "Big Tiny," "Dago Joe," "Chink," "Dutch," "Sweet Pea" and "Elmer." For this is a land of wandering men, and many have wandered here.

DESERTERS RELATE SAD TALE OF MANTANUSKA SITUATION

SEATTLE, June 23.—(AP)—Alaska's Matanuska valley was pictured today as a "dusty, mosquito-infested country" instead of a promised land by 31 California transient workers after their return here from the government's colonization project.

Their chorus of dissatisfaction came on the heels of criticism from some 40 or 50 of the colonists themselves, whose charges of inefficiency were passed on to Washington and resulted in a demand for a report on conditions.

Project Manager Don Irwin asserted that the dissatisfied colonists' charges were "greatly exaggerated." Reports were circulated at Palmer that N. Lester Trout, chief of the interior affairs office, who had been assisting Irwin, had been recalled to Washington.

All but three of the returning transients had asked to leave Matanuska, a spokesman said. Of the 178 more of the 400 temporary FERA workers there had "begged to come back" but were told there was insufficient room on the homeward bound ship.

"Three women colonists begged me to give them my identification tag," said William Peak, one of the returning men, "so that they could clip their hair, put on men's clothes and get back to the states."

"They wanted to get back here and work to send their families enough money to break away, too."

Statements similar to the charges of the dissatisfied groups were made by several members of the returning contingent.

They had carpenters helping in the kitchen; kitchen workers busing logging gangs, and tractor men doing the carpenter work," said E. R. Skaggs, one of the 31.

"When we left," said Muri H. Montgomery, another returning transient, "there was only one cabin where they need 200. It's a crime for those families with tiny children to face the winter with prospects like that. I only wish I could testify before a senate investigating committee."

At 8 o'clock dinner conferences and committee meetings will be held and an informal get-together will be staged at 8 o'clock to-night on the lawn in front of the dining hall.

Special Meetings.
Tuesday morning and Tuesday night sessions will be devoted to discussion of specialized subjects in various rooms and a general session will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the armory.

General sessions will be held both Wednesday and Thursday and the annual dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday night on the lawn in front of the dining room. The meeting will conclude Thursday afternoon.

At the opening general session at 2 o'clock this afternoon, C. C. Williams, society president, will preside and the address of welcome will be delivered by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech. D. C. Jackson, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will discuss objectives of engineering education, and W. E. Hotchkiss, president of Armour Institute of Technology, will speak on the new economies for engineers.

Talmadge To Speak.
Governor Talmadge will speak at the dinner at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday night and election of officers of the society will take place at the dinner also. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati, will deliver the principal address at that time.

Entertainment provided for women will include an excursion to start at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning from the Tech armory and to include a sight-seeing tour of Druid Hills and Emory University. Luncheon will be served at noon at the Druid Hills Country Club. A second excursion will get under way at 1 o'clock of the same day and the visitors will be escorted to Stone Mountain. A tea will be served at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon in the Tech dining hall.

The general local committee is headed by J. E. McDaniel as chairman; Dr. Brittain, W. V. Skiles, D. P. Savant, W. G. Perry, Floyd Field, R. S. King, H. W. Mason and Mrs. R. P. Black. The entertainment and reception committee is headed by W. G. Perry and Mrs. R. P. Black is chairman of ladies' entertainment.

GENERAL SUMMERALL INTEREST CUT TO 4 PCT. ON LAND BANK LOANS

He Vigorously Denies Contentation Channel Would Ruin Crops.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—With a warning to the people of Florida "against being misled by any interests whose reasons for opposing the canal are obvious," General Charles P. Summerall, former chief of staff of the United States army, today issued a statement in which he said the proposed Gulf-Atlantic ship canal would not damage the state's fresh water supply.

General Summerall is chairman of the ship canal authority of the state, and president of the Gulf-Atlantic Ship Canal Association.

"It has been brought to my attention," the statement said, "that considerable agitation has been created in the state of Florida against the proposed ship canal across the state by a campaign of misrepresentation."

The canal has been the subject of probably more exhaustive study than any other project ever undertaken by any state or the federal government. The special board of review appointed by the President for the purpose of examining all phases of this project, including the question of water supply, has reported that the damage to agriculture resulting from the construction of a sea-level canal would be negligible.

Summerall's statement pointed out the canal as the greatest opportunity ever offered to the entire state, and said its benefits would extend to every interest—agricultural, manufacturing, tourist, and the state's natural resources.

League Issue Linked.

"The advantage that the Anglo-German accord brings us therefore is that it prohibits a war in any form which will be the strongest in the Mediterranean. This will render our collaboration more efficient and perhaps more appreciated by the friendly powers (France and England)."

Eden was accompanied by William Strang, of the foreign office, whose particular field is the League of Nations. This fact coupled with his position as minister for League of Nations affairs, indicated his determination to bring before the League the subject of the dispute between the Italian-German dispute, despite the Italian government's reluctance to have this matter discussed.

JAP-GERMAN UNION
INDICATED IN REICH

BERLIN, June 23.—(AP)—Austrian matchmakers busied themselves today arranging a "marriage of convenience" between Germany and Japan.

It was obvious the empire of the Rising Sun and the third reich have clasped hands across the vast steppes of Asia. This fact coupled with his position as minister for League of Nations affairs, indicated his determination to bring before the League the subject of the dispute between the Italian-German dispute, despite the Italian government's reluctance to have this matter discussed.

Some 70 Japanese officers soon will arrive to study the reich's military methods and institutions. German newspapers are giving Japanese news increasing space.

Alfred Rosenberg, Nazi cultural leader, in an address before the diplomatic corps and the foreign press recently went out of his way to pay tribute to the Japanese.

Adherents to the new Germanic faith movement point to Japan as an example of how religion and statecraft blend in a model manner. Ardent Hitlerites make no secret of the fact that the Japanese principle of identifying the emperor with divinity should be applied to Germany. "We are to God through Adolf Hitler," is a dictum not infrequently heard, even from Nazi Christian pulpits.

To understand Germany's wooing of Japan it must be remembered that the fear of bolshevism is a cardinal objective of Nazi statecraft. Hitler rendered the so-called Polish corridor and decreed friendship with Poland to his subjects because he wanted a buffer state between himself and Russia.

It is in keeping with this general policy that Hitler is now seeking to bring himself and the nation which he believes can keep the Russians busy in the east.

Gipsy Smith Draws Biggest Crowd Sunday for Revival at Auditorium

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.
Pastor, Druid Hills Baptist Church.

"Feed me till I want no more." I have sat enthralled with thousands in the old municipal auditorium and listened to Caruso in his matchless interpretation of some one of the classic arias, holding our hearts in rapturous emotion. Sunday afternoon I stood with many others who could not find a seat and listened to Gipsy Smith sing the above couplet from one of the ancient hymns of the church, deeply conscious of the fact that I was listening to one of the great tenors of all time as he interpreted the truth and the beauty of the living gospel which he delights to preach.

Ten minutes before 3 o'clock—the hour for the service to begin—every seat in the auditorium and every spot in the sidewalks. The people were milling about the entrances pleading with the ushers and police and firemen to let them in. The hall had never been filled, and the people have never seen in Atlanta.

Fill Wesley Memorial Church.
"It is against the fire ordinance to admit another person in this building," declared Dr. W. A. Shelton, general chairman of the Gipsy Smith meeting. "You will please go to the Wesley Memorial church where Gipsy Smith Jr. will preach."

This announcement echoed through the corridors and the officers related to the sidewalks. The people reluctantly turned away from Gipsy Smith, many of them having come from neighboring towns, but were grateful for the privilege of seeing and hearing the song. Within a few minutes 2,000 people packed into the Wesley Memorial building to hear Gipsy Smith Jr.

The service Sunday afternoon was announced primarily for women, all seats on the first floor having been reserved for women until 2:30 o'clock. It was estimated that there were 5,000 women in the auditorium when

FHA Also Slashes Rate;
HOLC Announces End
of Refinancing.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—The Federal Credit Administration announced today that a reduction of 1/2 percent in interest rates by Federal Land Banks will bring the contract rate on new loans to an "all-time low" of 4 percent.

A reduction of 1.2 percent was made April 1, and an additional 1.4 percent April 10. The reduction effective July 1 is another 1.4 percent.

"This is not an emergency rate," Governor W. I. Myers of the FCA said. "This new low 4 percent rate is a direct reflection of the lower rate of interest borne by federal farm loans bonds sold by the Federal Land Banks. It is in keeping with the policy of the Farm Credit Administration to lower or raise the interest rates on new loans as the rates on the new bond issues vary."

At the same time interest rates on insured refinanced mortgages were reduced by the Federal Housing Administration from 5 1/2 percent to 5 percent, and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation from 6 percent to 5 percent.

The housing administration's lower rate of interest borne by federal farm loans bonds sold by the Federal Land Banks. It is in keeping with the policy of the Farm Credit Administration to lower or raise the interest rates on new loans as the rates on the new bond issues vary."

New regulations governing the mutual mortgage insurance plan under the National Housing Act, which became effective tomorrow, were announced by Stewart McDonald, acting housing administrator.

Chief among the changes: Reduction of the maximum interest rate allowed on all classes of insured mortgages to 5 percent annually. The maximum rate on mortgages have been allowed 5 1/2 percent. Rates lower than 5 percent may be charged by lending institutions.

Reduction of the insurance premium on all classes of insured mortgages to one-half of 1 percent annually. Refund in the form of credit to all mortgagors who have been paying insurance premiums at the old rate of 1 percent on certain classes of mortgages.

issue until Mr. Roosevelt makes his views known. At the same time, democratic leaders, worried over the growing trend of congress, also determined to ascertain the President's definite wishes before taking further steps. They planned to consult with him upon his return from Hyde Park and reported late yesterday that their action was growing.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, and Speaker Byrns said today there were reasons for prompt action but emphasized tax developments were up to the chief executive. Personally, Robinson said he was not at this session.

With members of both branches clamoring for adjournment by July 15, much controversial administration legislation yet unfinished, democratic chiefs conceded privately today that the National Taxpayers' holding congress in the prolonged session tax legislation would spell.

Meantime, two big fights confront administration leadership this week. Michigan's "death sentence" for holding companies and dividend tax provisions, the administration utility bill is to be taken up in the house. It is a dictum not infrequently heard, even from Nazi Christian pulpits.

To understand Germany's wooing of Japan it must be remembered that the fear of bolshevism is a cardinal objective of Nazi statecraft. Hitler rendered the so-called Polish corridor and decreed friendship with Poland to his subjects because he wanted a buffer state between himself and Russia.

House Faces Battles.
The house, which is developing into a New Deal storm center, also expected battles over the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Copeland-Bland ship subsidy, and the Doughton alcohol control bills, all of which are slated for consideration this week.

In the senate, a vote was scheduled tomorrow on the Bankhead $1,000,000,000 farm tenant loan bill, to be followed by action on the $501,000,000 nuisance tax bill. Because of the growing movement to get separate action on the President's new tax plan, efforts of the Long-La Follette group to add higher income and inheritance levies were forecast for rejection by leaders. But a scrap was in prospect over the senate's one-year continuation of the nuisance taxes. Mr. Roosevelt asked for two years and that is what the house voted.

Rewritten with the intention of meeting constitutional limits, the house AAA bill was near a final ballot in the senate agriculture committee.

While the house ways and means committee wrestled with the Guffey coal stabilization bill, the controversial Wagner labor dispute and the social security measures were in conference between the two branches where leaders sought to compose differences.

New Remedy for Angina Pectoris Discovered Through Stopping Heart

Drug Found Which Prevents Ventricular Fibrillation by Savant Testing Medicines During Artificially
Induced "Attacks."

MINNEAPOLIS, June 23.—(AP)—A remedy for sudden heart deaths, like angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis, discovered in a daring new method of temporarily stopping human hearts, was described to the summer meeting of the leaders of American science beginning a week's meeting here today.

The heart-stopping experiments also brought out new facts about treating heart block, which causes unconsciousness and which in extreme forms causes death from asphyxiation and electric shock.

The human guinea pig work was shown at the exhibition of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and of the Minnesota State Medical Association by M. H. Nathanson, M. D., assistant professor of medicine, University of Minnesota.

Professor Nathanson stops hearts in two ways. One by a sort of jiu jitsu pressure of the fingers near the carotid artery, which virtually stills the heart for a few minutes.

But adrenalin prevents it, and any of the drugs derived from adrenalin also prevent the unconsciousness.

"This data," Professor Nathanson's charts state in summarizing "suggests a definite therapeutic approach toward the prevention of both temporary and fatal cardiac syncope."

Although his exhibits do not discuss the knockout blows of the prize ring, it is possible that the "glass jaw" which makes some fighters easy marks, may be connected with the heart block mechanism. If that is so, swallowing a little epinephrine, one of the adrenalin drugs, might be useful between rounds.

He has stopped hearts or slowed hearts of fairly healthy men by injecting adrenalin, the energy-producing drug. The injection sets up the same kind of confusion in heart muscles as causes death in coronary thrombosis, the "industrial captain's disease," and angina pectoris.

Heart's Still Strong.
In most of the types of sudden death from heart troubles, Professor Nathanson explains, the heart itself is still good, sometimes structurally so strong that it appears good for several or many more years of life.

The heart confusion causing death from coronary thrombosis and angina pectoris is called ventricular fibrillation. Professor Nathanson finds that

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 23.—(AP)—Evelyn Clay Everett, daughter of a prominent Georgia family, will be operated on in a New York hospital tomorrow for an abdominal condition.

However, the supreme court hearings on her suit for separate maintenance and the counter suit of her husband, Robert, are scheduled to continue tomorrow morning. Everett's attorney, Lester D. Stickle, said that he would fight a postponement.

Mrs. Everett's 16-year-old daughter, Helen, testified at Saturday's hearing that her mother had at various times at least three men acquaintances, whom she named, who were accustomed to visit the Everett home in the absence of Everett. The girl testified that these acquaintances often gave her mother presents including candy and liquor.

PARIS FAVORITE DENIED DUEL BY POLITICAL FOE

Ousted in Stavisky Scandal,
Former Police Chief Said
To Have Lost Rights.

PARIS, June 23.—(AP)—Jean Chiappe, plump little Corsican, met a serious rebuff in an affair of honor today on the eve of a triumphant political comeback.

The former Paris police prefect, removed in February, 1934, as an outgrowth of the Stavisky scandal, was assured the presidency of the Paris municipal council—but a political opponent refused to fight a duel with him on the ground that he is not entitled to duelist's rights.

Pierre Godin, former president of the municipal council, sent back Chiappe's challenge, contending that the former police chief, who is the idol of the city's masses, relinquished his right to meet anyone on the field of honor when he refused to fight a Corsican editor two years ago. This is a grave violation of the duelist's code.

Chiappe, who is certain of election tomorrow, was angered by Godin's public letter accusing Chiappe of "bad faith" when Godin was mayor and Chiappe police chief before the election of February 6, 1934. He challenged Godin.

The affair now must be submitted to a jury composed of representatives of both principals. They will decide whether Chiappe is eligible to fight a duel.

THE WAY TO STOP THEM

Arrests for drunken driving in 1934 in the 323 large cities of the United States were below those for the last four "typical years of national prohibition," according to a statement issued by Captain William H. Stayton, founder of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which led the fight for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and now chairman of Repeal Associates.

The statistics announced are the result of a survey taken, it is explained, "to determine the exact facts as to intoxicated drivers in relation to automobile accident fatalities, the survey having been decided upon as the result of the charges of professional prohibitionists that intoxicated drivers of automobiles were responsible for an alarming increase in automobile accidents since repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

During the years from 1928 to 1931, inclusive, the average number of arrests from drunken driving was 24,366, the highest number being registered in 1928, when 24,455 such arrests were made. Under repeal in 1934 only 23,205 arrests occurred.

The years 1932 and 1933 are not considered as normal prohibition years, as the sale of beer was legalized in the former and repeal effected in the latter. The average arrests for the two years was approximately 21,000. It is pointed out further that these two years were the worst period of the depression, when automobile operation, as shown by gasoline consumption, was at the lowest mark in a decade.

That there should have been a decline in arrests for drunken driving during the first full year of transition from prohibition to control emphasizes the inaccuracy of the predictions made throughout the repeal campaign that the return of legal sales of liquor would make more acute the dangers of the highways and streets, and the recent effort of propagandists to give the impression that this is now the case.

Just the opposite is true, despite the increase in highway accidents caused by other causes than drinking. It gives gratifying indication that with the strengthening of the state control laws a steady decline will be registered in such arrests.

The attainment of this objective can be hastened by the courts if every one brought before them on the charge of drunken driving is, on conviction, deprived of the right to drive for a year. Since Georgia has no license law, licenses cannot be nullified, as is the case in most of the states, but there are other ways to keep drunken persons from behind the driving wheel.

Some of the Atlanta judges have placed both fines and chain gang sentences on drunken drivers, suspending the gang sentences on the promise of those convicted that they would not drive for a year.

Not all of Atlanta's judges have adopted this wise method of overcoming the inefficiency of the existing laws regulating the operation of automobiles, and those who have done so at times have not made it a sustained practice.

If this policy became a standing rule of Atlanta's courts—and of every court in Georgia—drunken driving would disappear as a serious threat to the safety of the highways and streets.

ing says officials have become attached to them. In these cases, it is assumed, they cut away the lounge.

THE BAR ACTS.

The action of the grievance committee of the Atlanta Bar Association in filing information with Solicitor-General Boykin on which to base disbarment proceedings against Robert E. Lee, now under federal indictment in the American Bond & Shares Company collapse, is re-assessing evidence that the local bar is determined to clean its house of unworthy members.

Unethical tactics by crooked lawyers have become so widespread throughout the country during the past few years, largely as an outgrowth of the era of major crime from which the United States is now emerging, that the legal profession as a whole has seriously suffered.

Realizing the danger of the loss of the high respect in which the profession has been held by the public, bar associations in every state in the country have led the fight to weed out from their membership lawyers willing to stoop to unethical methods and have them disbarred from practice.

The Atlanta Bar Association was among the first to awake to the seriousness of the situation and has energetically sought prosecution of all such lawyers, whether or not they were members of the association.

In this campaign the members of the bar are not only upholding the honor and integrity of their profession, but contributing to the security of the community, and they should receive the full co-operation of the courts and the public.

SUFFERING LOUISIANA.

The plight faced by the municipal government of New Orleans in its inability to pay the salaries of city employees is directly chargeable to the special laws passed by the Long-controlled legislature for the specific purpose of overthrowing the Walmisley administration.

It is another illustration of the tribulations and humiliations the good people of the state are being forced to undergo because of the stranglehold on its affairs obtained by the obnoxious politician who has proven a trouble-maker at home and a thorn in the side to the senate.

Dominating the legislature, Long has used the law-making power in the effort to bring about the downfall of his enemies and crush all opposition to his policies. The present empty condition of the New Orleans city treasury is the result of a special law enacted making it impossible to collect taxes until fall, and no loans can be negotiated because the banks are fearful that if made they will be nullified by Long.

Thus this proud southern city, with a rich heritage of civic progress, has been forced to go as a mendicant to the federal government to secure aid in the predicament forced upon it for purely political reasons. As a result, control of ten of the most important departments of the municipality will pass under the direction of Washington.

New Orleans has the sympathy of the people of the south, in whom is ingrained a pride in the city which represents to so great a degree the lure and the spirit of the days of old and of the present. Sooner or later the city will emerge from her time of trial and tribulation and erase the memory of a period so fantastic as to be almost unbelievable.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

What is a "Yes Man?"

In every grade of humanity, in every trade and association, there are individuals to whom the appellation "yes men" is applied from time to time. We have them in the newspaper offices. We have them in the churches, in the banks, in the government and everywhere. The "yes-man" is an unconscious menace to success, although he thinks he is the most useful member of the crew. He is a dead-weight, who brings devastation in his wake wherever he goes. His very anxiety to please those in authority by praising instead of giving his unprejudiced opinion, becomes a factor which withholds success from the very enterprise under discussion. If the "yes-man" has any opinions of his own, it is his policy to withhold them. He remains silent. He waives his right to individual opinion and bows his head in amiable and congratulatory agreement rather than risking displeasure.

Anti-Social Creature.

Everyone of us looks through different eyes, and perhaps one man's vision is a case may be a long range of vision. It may be the saving of a situation. It may open up fresh fields of ideas. But the "yes-man" with that sickly desire for approval suppresses his opinion, regardless of the consequences. He is, therefore, an anti-social creature and a danger.

If I were ever to stand at the head of an undertaking, I would have no yes-men around me. I would want collaborators who had something to say and who said it, never mind how disagreeably they might offend me. In the end, I would follow my own notions and plans, that's understood, but without having consulted my collaborators and having adopted their views without their suggestions. Fellow who had not the courage of their convictions would get the gate and quickly.

My Model Newspaper.

Since I don't know much about the details of other businesses, having concentrated all my life on newspapers, I sometimes dream of founding a model newspaper. I don't know where. But I don't want to have a very small town and not a very big one either, medium-sized. I would engage a number of young men and women to work for me. I would give them a task. You know, you study economics. You seem to have a flair for that, to judge by your school record. But study. Don't let me hear that I want you to do economic ideas that belong to the 16th century. Every book that appears on the subject, you read it and inwardly digest it.

You, Patrick, you are a poet. Go ahead, poetize. Fly up to heaven and ferret down in the nethermost depths of hell. Let us feel the meaning of life. . . .

And you, dear Romeo, you vagabond, you dreamer-romancer, go and roam. Mix with them, out there in the slums and tell us their thoughts and hopes and loves. We don't need your face your face around this office. Just write. Anything!"

If a young fellow came to me and said: "Boss, that mayor we have is a crook. I think I have the dope on him. I would like to see him stop speaking. I'd stop him."

"Go and fix him, boy, and lambast it into him. Never mind the consequences. The consequences are mine. We're out to fight in this joint. Go to it!" But I would have no patience with lick-spittles, or smiling Johnnies, or yes-men and crawlers. These guys would plumb to hell. (Copyright, 1935, for The Constitution.)

DELINQUENT PARENTS AND PRECOCIOUS CHILDREN

One of the greatest dangers to an article on alcohol entitled "Drink and Show Your Ignorance," which appeared in this column recently said it was quite different from some of the other articles. It was a certain so-called "here's to your health" doctor. Another said physicians of all people, should never drink. I have heard a large share of them drink, drink too much.

Miss S. E. M. asks for information concerning the effects of drinking on the health of a woman. Our society is to debate on this subject. . . . Some smoke and some drink, so I have to know what I'm talking about. I am a high school girl. The society calls for suppression. If she is a college or university woman, the physiology and hygiene department of the medical school would be interested in all the data required for such a debate. These degenerate days when there is so much insidious propaganda in the form of tobacco and alcohol parents who fail to exact pledges from their children against both smoking and drinking are certainly delinquent. The average physician is miserably far more potent than you and I had to cope with when we were young.

One of the seven readers who write to express indignation and resentment of the article "Drink and Show Your Ignorance" said I displayed in that article "the most complete ignorance of the facts of alcoholism."

After all, we shouldn't expect ingratitude of Finland. It isn't as if she were an old lady to whose aid we had rushed in time of peril.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon

CAKE

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The political frosting was so thick on President Roosevelt's wealth-taxing program that some confusion has developed as to what is in the cake underneath, if there is a cake.

The best tax economists outside the government have been carving on it among themselves to separate the froth from the substance. What they have found is that, no matter how you slice these wealth-sharing suggestions, they still amount to little more than good campaign slogans. Not only from them, but also from good New Deal sources, you can learn off the record that this phase was intended primarily as a little extra sweetening for Huey Long, who has been sour on the New Deal lately.

WEALTH-SHARING

Mr. Roosevelt wisely neglected to mention any rates for his wealth-sharing inheritance taxes. This makes it difficult but not impossible to get a good idea of what to expect from them.

The only rate guide you have is the one offered by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau a few weeks ago. When the boom was up, he suggested a schedule of extra-heavy inheritance rates, matching existing surtax rates. He estimated they would raise $300,000,000 a year, possibly more. President Roosevelt does not want to go that far, so, if you take the $300,000,000 revenue expectation from this source, you will have an optimistic average guess.

If you slice this up among 120,000,000 people, you will find that your slice would be $2.50 a year, which you would not get because it would be applied to reduce the federal debt.

If you apply it to a $29,000,000 debt and compare it with a $8,500,000,000 budget, you can see that Mr. Roosevelt will have to go out and slay a lot of millionaires fast to get his books balanced that way.

The truth is that the government may break up a few hundred fortunes this way, but that the great bulk of the wealth of the country does not lie in these bulging reservoirs.

EXPERIENCE To get it another way: 133 estate taxes were paid in 1933 on estates valued at more than a million dollars each. The net taxable worth of these estates was $284,000,000; the federal tax paid $28,000,000. If the government had seized these estates entirely by a 100 per cent tax on them, it would have received only $256,000,000 more than it did. No one is proposing to go more than half that far, including Mr. Roosevelt.

45 CENTS Slice the froth off the plan for taxing more heavily the incomes of more than a million dollars, and you will find the same thing. In 1933 there were exactly 46 persons in that class (in 1929 there were 513). Using the latest 1933 figures, you will find the taxpayers in the millionaire income class had a net taxable income of $81,000,000 and paid taxes of $26,000,000.

If the government had confiscated all incomes of more than a million that year, its revenue would have been only $55,000,000 more than it was.

If this had been shared among 120,000,000 persons it would have amounted to around 45 cents per person.

CITRUS The real meat in Mr. Roosevelt's tax cake is the proposed graduated tax on business. This is composed of a citrus business—half orange, half lemon. The orange is for the smaller businesses whose taxes would be reduced roughly 25 per cent; the lemon for the big fellows, who would have their taxes increased that much.

If you go into the culinary composition of this scheme, you will find the original recipe was written by Supreme Court Justice Brandeis. Essentially it is his tax on bigness, milder than he wanted it, but still strong enough to make large corporations want to break up and become little ones.

But from a revenue standpoint, the meat itself is that if you take a million dollar corporation income as the dividing line between big and little business and apply Mr. Roosevelt's formula, you will get $37,000,000 more revenue each year above the line and lose $27,000,000 below it. (Based on returns of 1932, last year available. The net gain on this basis would be $10,000,000 a year.)

CONCLUSION Add it all up and you will find, if Mr. Roosevelt had seized and confiscated all estates and all incomes over a million dollars in 1933, he would have obtained only $314,000,000 more than he did—$2.95 for each citizen in the United States. And if his corporation tax had been in effect that year, he would have received $10,000,000 more.

These figures represent depression fortunes and depression incomes. As times get better, the revenue would increase, but the figures adequately illustrate the impossibility of making the rich pay more than a small share of the freight. They also show there is no more in Mr. Roosevelt's tax cake than revenue raisins.

ANSWER One smart political economist has estimated that each single letter in each word of the tax message would bring 100 votes to Roosevelt, which observation covers that end of the situation adequately.

The Verdict Will Be Unfair If the Jury Can't Get the Facts

By Robert Quillen

When a national magazine describes conditions in your community, the chances are many to one that you will find the description inaccurate. No reporter, however honest and smart, can inspect a nation-wide state of imperfection and get all the facts straight in the few weeks at his disposal.

Take Walter Davenport's article about relief conditions in Collier's. He says, among other things, that the southern planter (thousands of him) had quit furnishing his tenants food and clothing and fertilizer and shifted this burden to the relief agencies.

The planter got 12 cents a pound for his cotton, "but why, they asked, should they spend any of it on furnishing their tenants" when the tenants could appeal to the relief administration?

So they "forced their tenants, chiefly negroes," to go on relief. And "this, you see, put the whole problem of caring for the tenant upon the government."

That, you will admit, seems a rather dirty trick. But the story tells too much or too little to reveal the truth.

The truth is that the planter continued to "furnish" his tenant through the summer and autumn. But when the crop was harvested in the fall, and the tenant received his share of the proceeds, less the sum advanced by his landlord, he demanded his immemorial right to loaf until the time for spring plowing.

Nothing could induce him to throw up a terrace to prevent a wash, to pile rock in a young gully, or to do anything else in the nature of labor. He was through.

Yet he had to eat, and he expected the planter to finance his five-months period of loafing.

The planter borrowed money and gave a mortgage on his farm as security. But he got no security for the money advanced to tenants. If the tenant, sometime in early spring, decided to move to a better farm or die or merely quit work, nothing could stop him or make him pay back the money advanced. Yet the planter took the risk because it was the custom.

Relief changed all that—in many instances. The planter said to the tenant: "I'll borrow money and begin furnishing you when you are ready to begin work in the spring. But I'm under no obligation to finance your period of loafing while the government is taking care of everybody else who is idle. Go on relief till work time."

No wonder the solution of national problems is delayed by misunderstandings and conflicting opinions when almost nobody can learn the truth outside of his immediate neighborhood.

Take the little drink, and if you take the little drink you're sure to weaken, and then it is easier to take another drink, and you're sure to weaken. That's why a solemn pledge given in honor and affection is the best happiness insurance in the world.

ATLANTA HOME OWNER TOPS LIST FOR SPACE

Those Who Rent Quarters
Live in Less Rooms;
Survey Shows.

Home owners in Atlanta fare decidedly better than those who rent homes or apartments at least in so far as the number of rooms is concerned, according to a survey of 61 leading American cities made in 1934 and just announced by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

In Atlanta owner-occupied homes have only 0.7 persons per room, with the average number of rooms per dwelling unit being 6.1 rooms. Renters, however, do not fare so well. Among renters there are 1.1 persons per room, and the average number of rooms per dwelling unit is 4.4.

This city ranks near the top of the list in the number of rooms per person in owner-occupied homes. The most spacious housing for owners was found in several New England cities, which averaged 0.6 and 0.7 persons per room.

In sharp contrast, Atlanta is at the bottom of the list in the number of persons per room in rented dwellings. It shares this position with Columbia and Charleston, S. C.

The survey was made as a CWA project, and announcement of it was made by C. T. Murchison, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Rentals in Atlanta in 1934 were below average, the survey reveals. The average annual rental bill in 1929 was only $273, and this declined to $222 in 1933. This contrasts with an average of $328 in Portland, Maine, where rents were highest, and $146 in Paducah, Ky., where they were lowest. Atlantans paid 22.7 per cent of their income for rent during 1933, and the average income was $970.

Mexican Envoy Arrives.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(UP)—Don Francisco Castillo Najera, recently appointed Mexican ambassador to the United States, arrived in Washington today. He was met at the Union station by the embassy staff.

MEXICO-CATHOLIC TRUCE INDICATED

Colima Lets Priests Return;
New York Churches Attack Cardenas.

MEXICO CITY, June 23.—(UP)—First indications of a truce in the long struggle between the government and the Catholic church were seen today in dispatches to the newspaper El Universal that the state of Colima is permitting the return of priests expelled last April.

The reports were interpreted as bearing out recent predictions that the ministerial changes which followed the cabinet crisis last week would be accompanied by a "new deal" for Mexico's Catholics.

Replacement of Tomas Garrido Canabal, foe of the Catholic church, by General Saturnino Cedillo as minister of agriculture, marked the end of the anti-Catholic attacks by Canabal's "red shirt" organization, and peace moves by the new Cardenas cabinet had been forecast for several days.

General Cedillo had been regarded generally as tolerant in his religious views since his former military overlord of the state of San Luis Potosi had afforded Catholics in that district guarantees of safety.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(UP)—Two hundred and forty-nine Catholic churches in New York today attacked the Cardenas government of Mexico for "crucifixion and hypocritical persecution" of Catholics.

In sermons requested by Patrick Cardinal Hayes, priests in the church in New York spoke out on the "Church in Persecution" and asked for prayer to "end the diabolical treatment of our sister church in Mexico."

High priests of St. Patrick's cathedral said the move was "the first step" to enroll all religions in the United States against the Cardenas government.

"The persecution is not against Catholics alone but against all religion," the priests said. "We hope to induce the government to protest formally to President Cardenas."

Phelps Likes Book Game

DR. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS, Three of America's ablest and most revered authorities on English literature, representing three great universities, pay glowing tribute to The Atlanta Constitution's $1,800 Book Game. Dr. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, terms it "an admirable plan, and the results should be wholly beneficial." Dr. Bliss Perry, of Harvard, says, "The Book Game seems to me a capital idea! It should be as much fun as golf, and much safer than playing the stock market." Dr. Charles C. Miller, of Notre Dame, believes that the contest should prove to be an "effective way of arousing interest in our English literature, and of raising the cultural level of our people. I hope therefore that it will be eminently successful."

WALLACE PLEDGES PRESS FREEDOM

Hints of Regulation of Advertising by Government.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—Determination "to do nothing that could be interpreted by any stretch of the imagination as interference with freedom of the press" was expressed today by Secretary Wallace. Replying to criticism of the pending AAA amendments, Wallace, in a letter to Jerome D. Barnum, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, said inclusion of advertising provisions in marketing agreements would inevitably mean regulation of advertising by the government.

W. C. FIELDS SICK Comedian Ordered To Take Year's Vacation.

HOLLYWOOD, June 23.—(NANA)—William C. Fields' famous cinema career comes to a tragic stop for at least one year as doctors who have been in attendance on the comedian declare a minimum of 12 months' complete rest is necessary to safeguard his life.

Fields has risen to the position of top box-office comedian of the Paramount lot since 1933, when he made "If I Had a Million," followed by "International House," which put him into front ranks. Today he is making more money at the age of 58 than at any other period in his career.

The enforced rest is likely to lose Fields in the neighborhood of half a million dollars. Studio losses will be tremendous and involve an entire change of program along comedy lines.

Fields' illness began with an attack of influenza, which was succeeded by complete collapse. He had just completed an as-yet-unreleased picture, entitled "Man on the Flying Trapeze."

DRUNKEN DRIVER DROP SINCE REPEAL CLAIMED

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(UP)—The man who helped bring about repeal of prohibition contended tonight the end of the dry era has reduced drunken driving.

Captain William H. Stayton, founder of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and now chairman of Repeal Associates, presented figures for 323 cities with an aggregate population of 36,000,000.

He said that in 1931—"a typical prohibition year"—there were 24,345 arrests for drunken driving in those cities. The figure Stayton gave for 1934 was 23,206.

HEART BALM FOR MEN ADVOCATED BY WOMEN

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 23.—(P)—Alimony for wronged husbands and "heart balm" payments for neglected suitors were urged in an "equal rights" resolution adopted at a regional conference of the national women's party today.

The resolution advocated equal rights before the law for men and women, equal pay for equal work, equal domicile, property and guardianship rights and "equal alimony in cases of divorce and equal consideration for men in cases of breach of promise."

The conference also asked nullification of section 213 of the National Economy Act forbidding women employed by the government to marry federal employees.

BOOK GAME

$1,800 in Cash Prizes for Book Titles!

By THE BOOK-GAME EDITOR.

Cash prizes totaling $1,800 await the winners of the fascinating Book Game which began in these columns Sunday. This new feature, approved by foremost authors, librarians and educators, has been made simple to play. It consists of a series of pictures by Herbert Carter, distinguished artist and etcher. These pictures represent the titles of well-known books. All you have to do to carry off the first prize of $1,000, or one of the other rich awards, is to supply the largest number of most appropriate title answers for the series. There are no subscriptions to get, now or later, in order to be eligible. There are no essays or letters to write or complicated puzzles to solve. Non-subscribers are cordially invited to take part.

For the convenience of those who may have overlooked the opening announcement Sunday, picture No. 1 is reprinted today, with picture No. 2 of the series. If you can pick the best book-title answers for these scenes you're walking hand-in-hand with Dame Fortune! Be sure to watch for picture No. 3 Wednesday.

The Most Appropriate Book Title
for This Picture is:

No. 1

INSTRUCTIONS.
Cash prizes totaling $1,800 are to be awarded following the Book Game. The first prize is $1,000, the second prize $400, the third $100, the fourth $75 and the fifth $25. Then there are 10 prizes of $10 each and 20 prizes of $5 each.

The prizes will be given to those who send in the most appropriate book title answers for the series of 80 pictures. All residents of Georgia and adjacent states, who have not won $1,000 or more in a previous contest conducted by this newspaper, are eligible to take part. Contestants do not have to obtain subscriptions in order to qualify for any of the prizes, and non-subscribers are eligible. There are no letters to write, essays to compose or extra pictures or puzzles to solve, and it is not necessary to register.

The pictures and answers are NOT to be submitted NOW. WAIT until ALL the pictures have been published, then bring them in with your answers, as a set.

Program of Popular Classics Charms Audience at Symphony

The Buckhead Symphony orchestra, under the baton of Enrico Leide, gave the second performance of its summer series of Sunday afternoon concerts in the "shell" at the outdoor theater on Peachtree road at Buckhead yesterday afternoon. The hour was at 5, an ideal time for the trees provided both shade and the breeze for an hour of complete enjoyment on a summer day. The attractiveness of the program, which was built of "popular" classics, allied with the attractiveness of the place to draw a goodly-sized audience of music lovers.

Leide was in his characteristic form, leading the 40-piece orchestra with musical authority in a program all the more demanding because each theme was so familiar. The players themselves responded to his directions with pleasing result and the program was another step forward in a movement of progressive foresight for the community that is fostered by Matt Perkins, editor of the North Side News and sponsored by a number of leading citizens of the city. That Atlanta should have a civic orchestra that would bring credit to this musical center of the south has been a vision of long standing and it is a gratifying thing that the Buckhead Symphony is leading to the realization of such an ambition.

The program opened with the overture to the "Merry Wives of Windsor," by Nicolai and proceeded to the "Prelude to the Meistersingers," by Wagner. The former was given a reading of verse and musical expressiveness and the latter was essayed with a reverence to the genius of Wagner, though the performance was ragged in spots. The lilting strains of Strauss' "Tales from the Vienna Woods" caught the auditors with its beautiful melodies and swaying rhythms.

After intermission the first number was a resume of the light opera, "Chimes of Normandy," by Planquette. This was followed by Beethoven's "Turkish March" and Chopin's "Polonaise Militaire in A major," arranged for orchestra. Both these numbers were particularly well done.

The closing number was "Pomp and Circumstance," Sir Edward Elgar's famous march.

It was announced that Franciszek Zachara, pianist and member of the musical faculty of Brenau College, will be the guest soloist next Sunday afternoon.

COST CUT PLANNED FOR AAA AGENCIES

Self-Perpetuating Bureaucracy Feared Dangerous
Eventually.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—Farm administration officials today were disclosed to be planning measures to reduce local administrative costs of the major crop adjustment programs.

While officials contended the administrative costs of the wheat program were lower than originally estimated, it was said that in preparation of the 1935 wheat contracts, steps were being taken to assure still smaller expenditures.

One official, declining to be quoted by name, said the AAA has been fully aware of the danger that the community and county committees might turn into self-perpetuating and permanent organizations. The possibility that these groups might be turned into powerful political forces recently was raised in a study by the Brookings Institute.

Cool!

Yes, the man who wears wash suits is cool. More than that, if his wash suits are properly laundered, he is smartly dressed. His fastidious appearance gives him confidence in himself and it excites the admiration of his associates. Of course, his costume must include a professionally laundered shirt—correctly starched, correctly ironed, correctly shaped. And the necktie—it can be the color of his choice. When it becomes rumpled or soiled—small matter. For a few cents its good looks can be restored—by proper cleaning and shaping. Be sure of summer smartness by sending your clothes to a super-skilled launderer and dry cleaner.

Flakes of Tetter on Scalp. Disappeared After Using Cuticura.

"The first sign of my little sister's tetter was an itching scalp and falling hair. There seemed to be layers of dead skin on her scalp which would come off in large flakes and leave raw places which would burn and sting. She would scratch and her hair came out gradually, and became very thin. "Mother tried several remedies but the trouble seemed to get worse. Her scalp had been in this condition about six weeks when mother began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using two cakes of Soap and two boxes of Ointment there was no sign of tetter." (Signed) Miss Marie Rudd, Rt. 1, Leasburg, N. Car.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25c and 50c. Tablets 25c. Sold everywhere. One sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. J3, Malden, Mass."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

Since you cannot all be here at the ball park to welcome our Crackers back home, amigos, it may be well to tell you that the day is a perfect one; the sun is bright and warm but there is a cool breeze and no heat.

It is a large good-natured crowd which is here some ten minutes ahead of the game. They are laughing. The sound of their laughter and their conversation comes up to the press box. It is punctuated by the sound that baseballs make when they slap against mitts. Because, you see, the pitchers are warming up.

There is lots of fresh air and sunshine and a great contentment and munching of peanuts and the drinking of soft drinks. And I cannot, for the life of me, amigos, find anything wrong with the scene. It is a pleasant Sunday afternoon as I write.

I have just left the clubhouse. There is an odor there that the baseball writers never forget. It is an odor of rubbing oils, of woollens wet with perspiration, of leather and of soap and shower baths. Put them all together and they mean baseball.

In the smaller dressing room for the umpires there was "Steamboat" Johnson and Claude Bond, the latter a local boy. They were shaking red clay dirt out of a large talcum powder can. It is "Birmingham dirt." The red clay dust from Birmingham is moistened and the new baseballs given a thin coating. It takes off the shine and makes the ball easier to handle.

It is a service all umpires render before each game. In addition, the pitchers are permitted to dust resin on the new balls. But no other artificial aid for the grip is permitted.

When the umpires come out they get a great round of applause. It is rather startling to hear applause for umpires.

The umpires and managers gather at the plate for the pre-game ritual of going over ground rules which always are the same. And the game begins.

WHAT A TOWN WE HAVE

Peck Hamel, lately of Memphis and even more lately of Syracuse, comes up to bat as the lead-off man. It is his debut as an Atlanta player and he gets a perfect storm of applause. We have quite a town, a generous people and a great baseball people.

On the bench before the game Eddie Moore, the Atlanta manager, greeted Peck Hamel.

"What sort of signs did you have up there?" he asked, speaking of Syracuse.

"We had plenty," said Peck Hamel. "Well, here are mine," said Eddie Moore. "When I give you the high-ball sign it means to run like the devil. When we are one run ahead or one behind that is the signal to steal second just so it isn't occupied. And you can use your own judgment as to third. My bunt signal is when I yell at you to bunt."

Peck Hamel grinned. "I'll try not to steal with the bases full," he said.

The system of baseball is simple enough for an intelligent ball player to understand. Eddie Moore very wisely isn't trying to affect a "master mind" attitude which some managers attempt and which the players know to be the old phonos balonus. Nothing else.

Peck Hamel, up at bat, pops out to second base and the crowd groans in sympathy. But the Crackers quickly get a run over and the cheers go up.

SILVER HAIRS AMONG THE GOLD.

It was Omar, the old tent-maker, sitting beneath the tree with his jug of wine and loaf of pumpnickel bread, who looked at life and observed, "A hair, perhaps, divides the false and true."

Observe the third inning as an easy lesson in why Eddie Moore sprouted several silver hairs among the gold.

Epps, the Birmingham catcher, first up in the third, belted one to deep right. Sheriff Harris, backing up against the boards, lost the ball in the sun and it went for a double. Ordinarily it was an easy out.

Malinoski, the shortstop, hit one to first and it took a wired hop as Hooks reached for it and went for a hit. Hughes rapped one to the pitcher's box which skidded out of the way. And then Ward singled cleanly only to be followed by Clancy, who was safe on an error. The club pulled out with but two runs. Yet it was a dizzy inning.

No one was in real error. It was just a very vivid illustration of what is meant by "the breaks" in luck. And it explains, as aforesaid, why managers become gray, feeble old men years before their time.

THE BASEBALL PICTURE.

The baseball picture never quite grows old. It is true that one ball game is very much like another. But the scurry of players to bases, covering this play and that, backing up throws and taking them; the hurry of umpires to be in position, all these make an ever-changing picture, one pattern after another. The soft dirt of the infield, smoothed before the play begins, reveals every step of the infielders, shows where every play has gone.

And then, momentous, ultimate things can occur. Such as Harris' home run in the ninth. Lipscomb is on when the Sheriff comes up.

He swings and the ball gets off on a line high to left field. It keeps rising and the roar of the crowd rises with it, growing to a shrill crescendo as the ball clears the signboard on the left-field bleachers and goes on into the distance. No puny single, not weak bunt, but a home run, the ultimate in hitting.

THE LAST THREE OUT.

The last three out are either easy or difficult. Any team will tell you that. They are the jinx three of the game.

The Crackers go in leading, 7 to 3, but Thomas scores the three big ones are left. Teams which have hit punily in eight innings have suddenly become raging sluggers in the ninth, driving in run after run.

So Thomas is careful. Legrant Scott, a rookie, singles to start it off to Birmingham. The Crackers are on their toes, eager, worried.

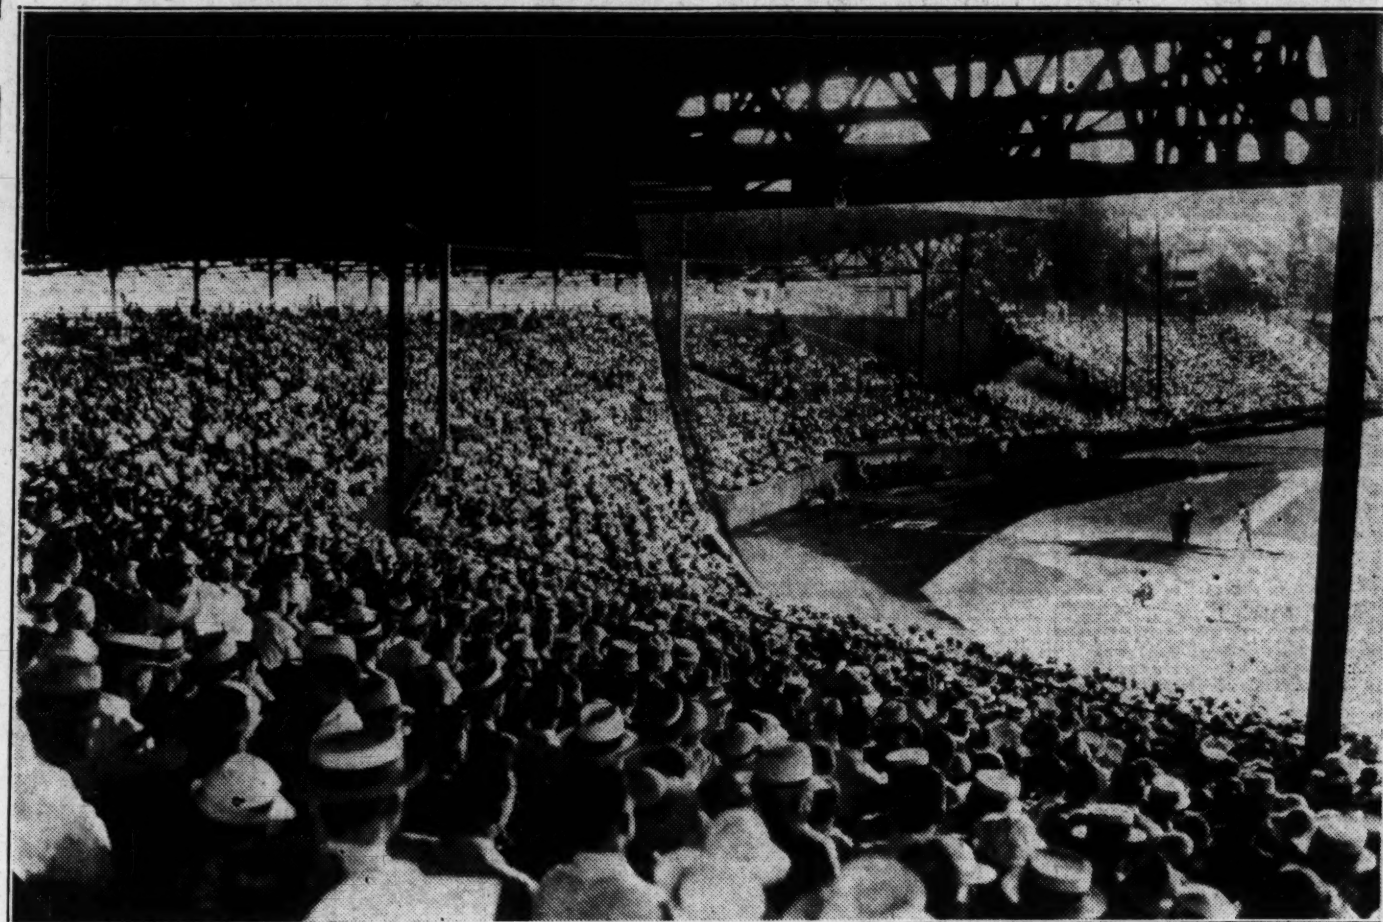

Two go out. And then the third one, Malinoski, drives a hard one to Hooks. The play is his alone. He goes far back of first base and takes the ball on a high hop. It becomes a foot race and he wins it, beating Malinoski.

The crowd swarms on the field, going for the fence exits. They are a bit excited, the home team is out in front, leading the league. And they have seen them demonstrate how it's done.

The end of a perfect baseball day—the home town winning by a good margin.

GRANT BEATS FRANKIE PARKER

Atlanta Star Makes Great Comeback in Stirring Five-Set Match.

up. All told, Grant scored 155 game points to Parker's 139. The match, which took two and a quarter hours to play under ideal conditions, had 16 deuce games, Grant winning nine of them.

The stroke analysis showed the margin of Grant's superiority but not the great lugging duels and the spectacular retrieving jobs. The stroke analysis gave: Placements—Parker 47, Grant 54; service aces—Grant 1, Parker 0; nets—Parker 32, Grant 27; outs—Parker 62, Grant 38; double faults—Parker 1, Grant 2.

PARKER WINS FIRST.

Parker won the first game, lost the second and then won three in succession, two of them after deuce, to go ahead to stay in the first set, although the games were so closely contested that he only outscored Grant, 40 to 36, in the set. The longest game was the seventh which went to deuce four times before Grant finally won it with two perfect drop shots. Parker won two out of the next three to win. Grant lost his service three times in that stretch.

The second set was all Grant's as he scored 30 points to Parker's 11. He won the first game at 7-5, lost the second at 4-2, and then won five in a row to square the match. In that set, he scored 11 placements to Parker's four.

Grant won the first two games of the third set, but Parker then won five in succession as he outscored his foe and ran him to all corners of the court, scoring 21 placements to Grant's 8.

After a 15-minute intermission, Betsy took off his long trousers and donned shorts for his final drive, which started with five straight victories. Parker stopped his rush by winning three deuce games in a row, but Betsy hammered over three beautiful placements to capture the final game and set, 4-1.

The final set was a breeze for Betsy after the first game Grant lobbed neatly to win it. Except for the third, won at 6-3, the rest of the games found him out in front and chasing Parker all the way. It took Betsy just 20 minutes to win that set—and there he stood—master of clay.

In the doubles final, J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., and Herbert Bell, New York, defeated Robert Bryan, Chattanooga, and John McDiarmid, Chicago, 6-4, 6-3, 5-7, 9-11, 6-2.

Emmanuel Firpo, the fiery Spaniard, who makes his wrestling debut in Atlanta Tuesday night at the Key arena, is a former middleweight champion and is apt to prove one of the most colorful wrestlers seen here. Firpo, the former Wild Bull of the Pampas, meets a tough foe in the semi-final. The promoters have put him on something of a spot in his debut by matching him with Honey Boy Hackney, the sensational New Jersey star whose chief weapon is the flying leg scissors.

The card is headlined by Otto Heinman, the giant German, and Jack Ross, the bald Greek, both being recognized as two of the toughest customers in southern wrestling circles. This will be a 90-minute, best-two-out-of-three falls match, while Firpo and Hackney will clash over the one-hour route.

The card, well-balanced throughout, features Young London, popular Atlanta boy, and Totem Pole Anderson, the Alaskan, in the 30-minute opener. Tickets are on sale at the Five Points Soda Company at popular prices or may be reserved by calling Ma. 2593.

Women's Golf Meet Opens Today

Qualifying rounds for Atlanta's annual Women's golf championship will be played this morning on the Capital City Country Club course. The qualifying will continue all day, with match play scheduled to open Tuesday morning.

All matches will be played in the morning and the players will be grouped into flights of eight each.

Mrs. Guy Butler is the defending champion and is rated one of the favorites to retain her crown. The tournament is being sponsored by the Atlanta Women's Golf Association and only those players who are members of the association or some private club affiliated with the association are eligible to participate.

Dorothy Krieb, who won the semi-finals in the southern tourney in her first attempt in big-time competition, will not compete for the title this year. She has been playing in several exhibitions recently and also in the southern and decided to pass up the city tourney.

Harold Weinberger Wins at Inglewood.

Harold Weinberger pulled one of the greatest upsets in the history of the Inglewood Country Club when he defeated Norman Elsas, a former club champion, 6-5, Sunday in the finals of the annual Directors' Handicap tournament. It was the first victory for Weinberger.

Weinberger took an early lead and was never headed. He played consistent all the way and was close to par.

Four some Scores Eight Under Par.

Scoring eight strokes under par, J. H. Starr, C. W. Carver, Dr. C. L. Douglas and C. S. Moelke won first prize Sunday in the regular weekly prize tournament on the No. 2 East Lake course. The winning score was 134.

Second place went to P. G. Lombard, T. L. Johnson, H. P. Bond and J. W. Roach at 136; with Dr. B. B. Gay, J. H. Pressley, A. N. Patton and J. B. Dorris, third, at 137.

Other low scorers were J. B. McConnell, B. F. Guy, J. J. Charters and F. J. Stone, H. T. Dobbs, J. A. Campbell, B. E. Cameron and F. East, Donald Sargent, George Fozz, Ernest Key and W. W. Cole, K. A. Stephenson, Ralph McClelland Jr., Randolph Brooks and Dr. J. C. Wright at 138.

Benon Freeman Jr., Jack Gray and H. L. White each broke 47. Sam Ham, of Gainesville, posted a 45, which is well below his usual standard.

And there were four ties in Class B for the runner-up chevron. E. D. Fine shot.

It was quite a shoot, was yesterday's, with young Harkins posting a 48 to beat out Zachry by two targets. J. L. Franklin winning the ham in Class A with a similar score and Bethel Ingram, of the Thomson Gun Club, triumphing in Class B with a like total.

There were four ties for the runner-up position in Class A. C. L. Talley, Benson Freeman Jr., Jack Gray and H. L. White each broke 47. Sam Ham, of Gainesville, posted a 45, which is well below his usual standard.

And there were four ties in Class B for the runner-up chevron. E. D. Fine shot.

GIANTS CHASE TERRYMEN BLANK CUBS, 8 TO 0, AND INCREASE LEAGUE LEAD.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(P)—The New York Giants, apparently out to build up an overwhelming lead in the National league pennant race, trounced another of their important rivals today, whitewashing the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 0, in the series opener.

The triumph made it seven out of eight over the other three first-division teams within eight days as they previously had trimmed the Cardinals and Pirates.

Fred Fitzsimmons, who seems to win only when he shuts out the opposition, was touched for 11 hits, but he was highly effective in the pinches and left 11 Cubs stranded on the paths. It was his fourth victory and his fourth shutout. Only three Chicago runners got as far as third.

Dick Bartell opened the shelling for the Giants in the first inning when he socked a home run with one on. And the Cub finger who beat the Giants five times last year lost to them for the third time this season, failing to survive the fifth inning.

Three passes and a timely double by Bill Terry netted two more runs in the third and a two-bagger by Joe Moore and Bartell's single produced one in the fourth. The final three-run burst that sent Warnerke to the showers came in the fifth, when Mel Ott drew a walk, Hank Leiber, Mark Koenig and Gus Mancuso hit singles and Travis Jackson contributed an infield out that brought home a run.

Included in the rather small Sunday crowd of 14,437 were Babe Ruth and his family and Jim Braddock, the heavyweight champion.

Mr. Mann Sees 200,000 Attendance by July Fourth

By Jimmy Jones.

Earl Mann, the smiling young man on the other side of the flying turnstiles, has set a new goal for Cracker baseball attendance.

It is a very dull day when Mr. Mann does not set a goal of some sort. He sets so many that it is a wonder he doesn't pull a Roy Reigels and run toward the wrong goal.

Yesterday he set another: "By July 4 Atlanta's baseball attendance will be 200,000—more than we drew all last season," Mr. Mann predicted as he thumbed an office calendar.

"Let's see now—that's 11 playing days away. We have two night games this week, Tuesday and Friday, and another Sunday game coming up with New Orleans. That's almost 30,000 right there. Then we have another night game with Nashville on Tuesday night, July 2, and a double-header with Nashville on July 4."

And if you care to gauge your own estimate by Mr. Mann's, consider the fact that the Crackers' game reached a grand total of 157,413 for 31 home games. Thus you see that Mr. Mann is not shooting at the moon by any means.

With the race still too close for comfort, thereby keeping interest at a high pitch, it is entirely within the bounds of probability that the Atlanta attendance not only will reach 200,000—as much as most minor league teams draw in a season—by July 4, but will actually exceed that figure with little better than half of the season gone.

After July 4 the Crackers will have 35 games to play at home, including a double-header with Little Rock August 4 to take up a rained out game.

Mr. Mann's only doubt now is whether to play both games of the July 4 double bill in the afternoon or one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Chances are he will decide on the former procedure.

There might be something more quiet than a Scottish Sabbath, but it is hard to imagine off hours. The city of steel meeting ball could be heard a half-mile distant as W. Lawson Little Jr., United States and British amateur champion, Joe Ezar, of Waco, Texas, and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., took a few practice strokes on the Gullane course in order to keep their hands flexible.

This un-Sabbathlike activity brought frowns from the devout Scots, however.

Henry Cotton remained a 4-to-1 favorite and Little was quoted at 12 to 1 along with Charles Whitcomb. Egar was bracketed at 20 to 1. Picard was a 50-to-1 bet, being bracketed with Joe Kirkwood, American trick shot artist.

Never before has a player overshadowed the field as Cotton has.

There are few wrestlers more popular than Orville Brown. Or more capable. He deserves a chance at Sauer. And Wednesday's match will more than likely determine his chances.

Sauer and Joe Cox, the former masked marvel, are matched in the feature, with Brown and Raines in the semi-final.

Joe Cox invaded Mexico not long ago and made a great record there. He is anxious to enhance his prestige by taking Sauer over the jumps. He is conceded a fair chance.

There is one other match on the excellent program arranged by Matchmaker Henry Weber. It includes Bob Wagner and Ray Richards, who will clash in the 30-minute opener.

Tickets are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters at popular prices.

tracts to succeed those expiring next Sunday at midnight.

Whether they would take enactment of the Guffey bill for granted and seriously attempt to reach an agreement was an unanswered question tonight. Some coal men suggested that another extension of present wages and hours—the third in three months—would be necessary.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, declined to comment.

Meanwhile, the Federal Trade Commission and NRA officials continued their conferences on voluntary wage and hour agreements for industry. A 40-hour week, with time and a half for overtime, was suggested in high official quarters as a possible standard of hours for these agreements.

The Guffey bill, originally drafted by the United Mine Workers, became involved in the wage and hour contract fight with the breakdown of the coal code's price structure late last winter.

The old contracts expired April 1. President Roosevelt, through Donald R. Richberg, obtained an extension through June 16. When that deadline neared, the bill was again introduced to Congress.

At Mr. Roosevelt's personal request, another extension was voted.

SHOE COMPANY PLANS
5 PCT. SALARY HIKE

NASHVILLE, June 23.—(AP)—W. J. Jarman, president of the General Shoe Company of Nashville, Gallatin and Tullahoma, said tonight that beginning July 1, 1,500 employees of his firm would receive a 5 per cent increase in salary.

Affecting all employees making under $18,000 a year, the salary boost, Mr. Jarman added, would cost the company $65,000 annually.

A. J. WARREN, 79, TAKEN BY DEATH

Former Nashville Business Man Had Lived Here Three Years.

A. J. Warren, former prominent Nashville (Tenn.) businessman, died last night at the residence of his son, J. E. Warren, at 121 Brookhaven drive. He was 79.

Mr. Warren retired from business three years ago to come to Atlanta. He was president of the Nashville Products Company for many years and was well known in that city. He was a native of Lincoln county, Tennessee.

Surviving are his wife; two sons, J. E. Warren, who is vice president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, and J. P. Warren, assistant treasurer of Southern Bell; two daughters, Miss Louise and Miss Mary Lee Warren; two sisters, Mrs. M. E. Wakefield, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Mrs. W. A. Culbertson, of Waxahatchie, Texas, and three brothers, F. P. Warren, of Wichita Falls, Texas; I. R. Warren, of Brinkman, Okla., and A. F. Warren, of Sanger, Texas.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

GANG SEIZED NEAR JOE LOUIS' CAMP

New York homicide squad, asserted the gang were linked with the recent Queens "street-corner murder" of Thomas Porter and Elizabeth O'Connor and the assassination of George Keeler in a Brooklyn apartment.

"We consider them as tough a gang as there is in the east," said Devine. "We suspect them of any number of crimes."

Not a Shot Fired.
The raids were conducted with clocklike precision and deftness.

The officers—state troopers and quick-triggered New York city detectives—moved quietly through the early morning mist and removed the bungalow's window and door screens without disturbing the slumbering occupants.

Then the score of raiders trained machine guns on the sleeping gangsters while fellow officers awoke them and ordered them to surrender.

Not a shot was fired. The raid was thus in marked contrast to the trap set for the Dillinger mob of desperadoes in the Wisconsin woods, in which several (CZ) workers and a Department of Justice agent were slain while the gangsters escaped.

The seven men who slept in the bungalow "fortress" identified themselves as Edward Gaffney, 35; Joseph McCarthy, 28; B. Jackson Bell, 29; Arthur Gaynor, 31; John J. Hughes, 31; Frank Fox, 27, and Louis Balner, all New York.

Police said Balner was an alumnus of Detroit's "purple gang."

HOUSEMAID ARRESTED IN SLAYING OF BROKER

Girl Admits Hammer Blows,
Leaving Him To Die of Monoxide.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP)—A housemaid was held without bail today on a first-degree manslaughter charge growing out of the mysterious death of John L. Burness, 30-year-old wealthy Long Island broker and sportsman.

Miss Dorothea Kassady, 20, daughter of a Uniontown (Pa.) miner, was held on the manslaughter charge and her friend, Irene Brozovic, 19, was detained as a material witness for the grand jury next Thursday.

The arraignment of the two domestics, who share a room in the luxurious Atlantic beach home of William Brown where Burness' body was found yesterday, climaxed a night of investigation by District Attorney Martin W. Littleton, of Nassau county, Police Inspector Harold R. King and Lieutenant Jesse Mayford.

Littleton said the Kassady girl signed a statement admitting striking the broker on the head with a hammer in the Brown garage and leaving him to breathe carbon monoxide fumes of his host's car.

The statement given to police by Littleton and King said that Miss Kassady, 20, admitted striking the broker on the head with a hammer on the motor of the car and locked the garage doors after leaving Burness unconscious from the hammer blows.

Leaving the unconscious broker in the closed garage with the car motor running, Miss Kassady then returned to the house, King quoted her as admitting. Later she notified neighbors and Irene who brought the body to the driveway.

A confusing note was injected into the case today by Dr. Howard W. Neill, noted pathologist, who performed the autopsy. Dr. Neill said marks on Burness' body indicated the blow was a result of the hammer blows, were inflicted after Burness' death from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Police were inclined to believe that because of the broker's heavy shock of hair, the alleged hammer blows made no mark.

Burness was visiting Brown while the latter's wife was away. Burness was single.

SEC INVESTIGATOR
NABBED BY 'G-MEN'
FOR TAKING BRIBE

again last Friday evening in Jones' home.

Hidden behind pictures and a desk were dictograph microphones leading to headquarters in the attic, at which spot Police Justice Charles E. Jones, of Seaside; Assistant United States Attorney Murphy, Assistant District Attorney Horan and several stenographers.

Raybell then allegedly offered to "square" the case for $50,000, according to the indictment, and finally agreed to do it for $27,500, $25,000 to be paid immediately, $2,500 within a month and the balance when the case had been settled to Jones' satisfaction.

The arrangement was made, Lieutenant Carney continued, and this morning Raybell called at the Jones home for the initial payment.

Given $25,000 in marked bills, then, as he was about to leave the house, Federal Operatives McNulty and Vincent appeared in the lower hall, both with revolvers drawn.

Raybell ran into the dining room and attempted to throw the money behind a door, but the federal men took him and the money into custody.

Previously Jones had consulted first with his counsel and then with Police Justice Carter and later District Attorney Walter A. Ferris and Department of Justice men. He explained Raybell's proposal to him. They all aided in perfecting the trap sprung today in the Jones home.

Jones tonight said Raybell had told him that his salary of $5,000 as a federal investigator was "not sufficient" for him and that as soon as he got the money he was planning to go to Europe.

"Judge Burns described Raybell as an 'accountant investigator' for the SEC, but it was said in other quarters that he was chief in charge of the SEC's investigation of his case, which concerns the bribery of prospective witnesses or officials connected with a court action.

Later, it developed Raybell had boasted to Jones that he had been in charge of the investigation of his case, although actually he was only one of the SEC men who worked on it at the beginning. He was later removed from the case.

Jones tonight swore out a complaint against the former SEC investigator, charging him with violating Section 370 of the state penal code, which concerns the bribery of prospective witnesses or officials connected with a court action.

In New York city, United States District Attorney Frank W. H. Adams announced that Raybell was held for the Department of Justice and would be arraigned on a federal charge tomorrow. He would not say just what the charge would be.

BISHOP CANNON ASSAILS RELIEF SYSTEM IN U. S.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 23.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon Jr., asserted today in a sermon that "those who can get work and will not do so, should be compelled to work, if they eat, so that they may no longer be an oppressive burden upon the honest, industrious, self-respecting taxpayers of the nation."

Dr. Cannon, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, spoke at the Pacific International Exposition. While he believed the "hungry should be fed and the naked should be clothed," he said, "present relief methods are causing increasing concern."

"Under the present system," he said, "there has been developed a veritable army of relief workers, the interest of many of whom seems to be, not to reduce the number of those receiving relief or to discourage applications to the roles, but to increase the workless multitude that the relief workers may have more money to distribute and that their jobs may be more secure."

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Familiar Hand.
In the hand below the bidding was clearly influenced by the part-score of 40 and the final contract was not the best spot in which to try for game.

At the same time, our illustration portrays the mill run of hands met with every day at thousands of tables throughout the nation, and its simplicity serves as a purpose. Intricate hands are the exception; average distribution the rule.

The hand below will be found reminiscent of many you have played. South dealer. Neither side vulnerable. North-South score: 40.

♠ Q J 9
♥ J 6 2
♦ K J 7 5 2
♣ 10

♠ 10 6 4
♥ 10 8 5 4
♦ A 8 3
♣ K 7 2

The bidding:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 1♠ Pass
2♠ Pass 2♠ Pass
2NT Pass Pass Pass

North can scarcely be blamed for leaving two no-trumps alone, although as it happens the play for three diamonds would have been much easier.

The Play.
West opened the four of hearts, East winning with the ace. The fall of South's queen showed East that West could subsequently lead hearts with impunity. It therefore seemed best to East to shift to clubs, despite South's bid of the suit, on the principle of anticipating a later situation in which West might be forced to open one of the black suits. It is notable that East's decision made the play much more difficult for South than it would have been after a heart continuation.

East led the club jack. The temptation was strong for South to play the queen, because if the finesse lost South would at least retain a major tenace. Declarer decided, however, that he could not at this point afford to lose a tempo in the establishment of the diamond suit. If he won the trick at once with the ace and started knocking out the adverse diamond honors he was sure of establishing the diamonds before the jack of hearts was knocked out, which would prevent West from leading from being established and cashed in time to stop contract. Analysis appears to demonstrate that South's decision was a wise one.

After taking the club jack with the ace South led the ten of diamonds, which rode to East's queen. East returned a small club and South's right of Police Justice Charles E. Jones, of Seaside; Assistant United States Attorney Murphy, Assistant District Attorney Horan and several stenographers.

Raybell then allegedly offered to "square" the case for $50,000, according to the indictment, and finally agreed to do it for $27,500, $25,000 to be paid immediately, $2,500 within a month and the balance when the case had been settled to Jones' satisfaction.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

A Rose Leaf Cream That Is Excellent for Cleansing the Skin

By MIGNON.
If you are one of the fastidious people who want a cleansing cream with a very delicate scent to it, I can tell you of a very good one that you are going to like. This cream smells exactly like rose leaves, and it is a light oil cream that liquefies immediately upon touching the skin. It is extremely fine in texture and does take away dirt.

If you want to be saving—and most people do these days—take a small pad of absorbent cotton and wring it out in cold water, then use it to dip it into the jar. Next, proceed with the cream and use it as you would with your fingers, and forget about the cotton.

One thing about this cream, which is not expensive, is that it takes a little of it to do the work for which it is intended.

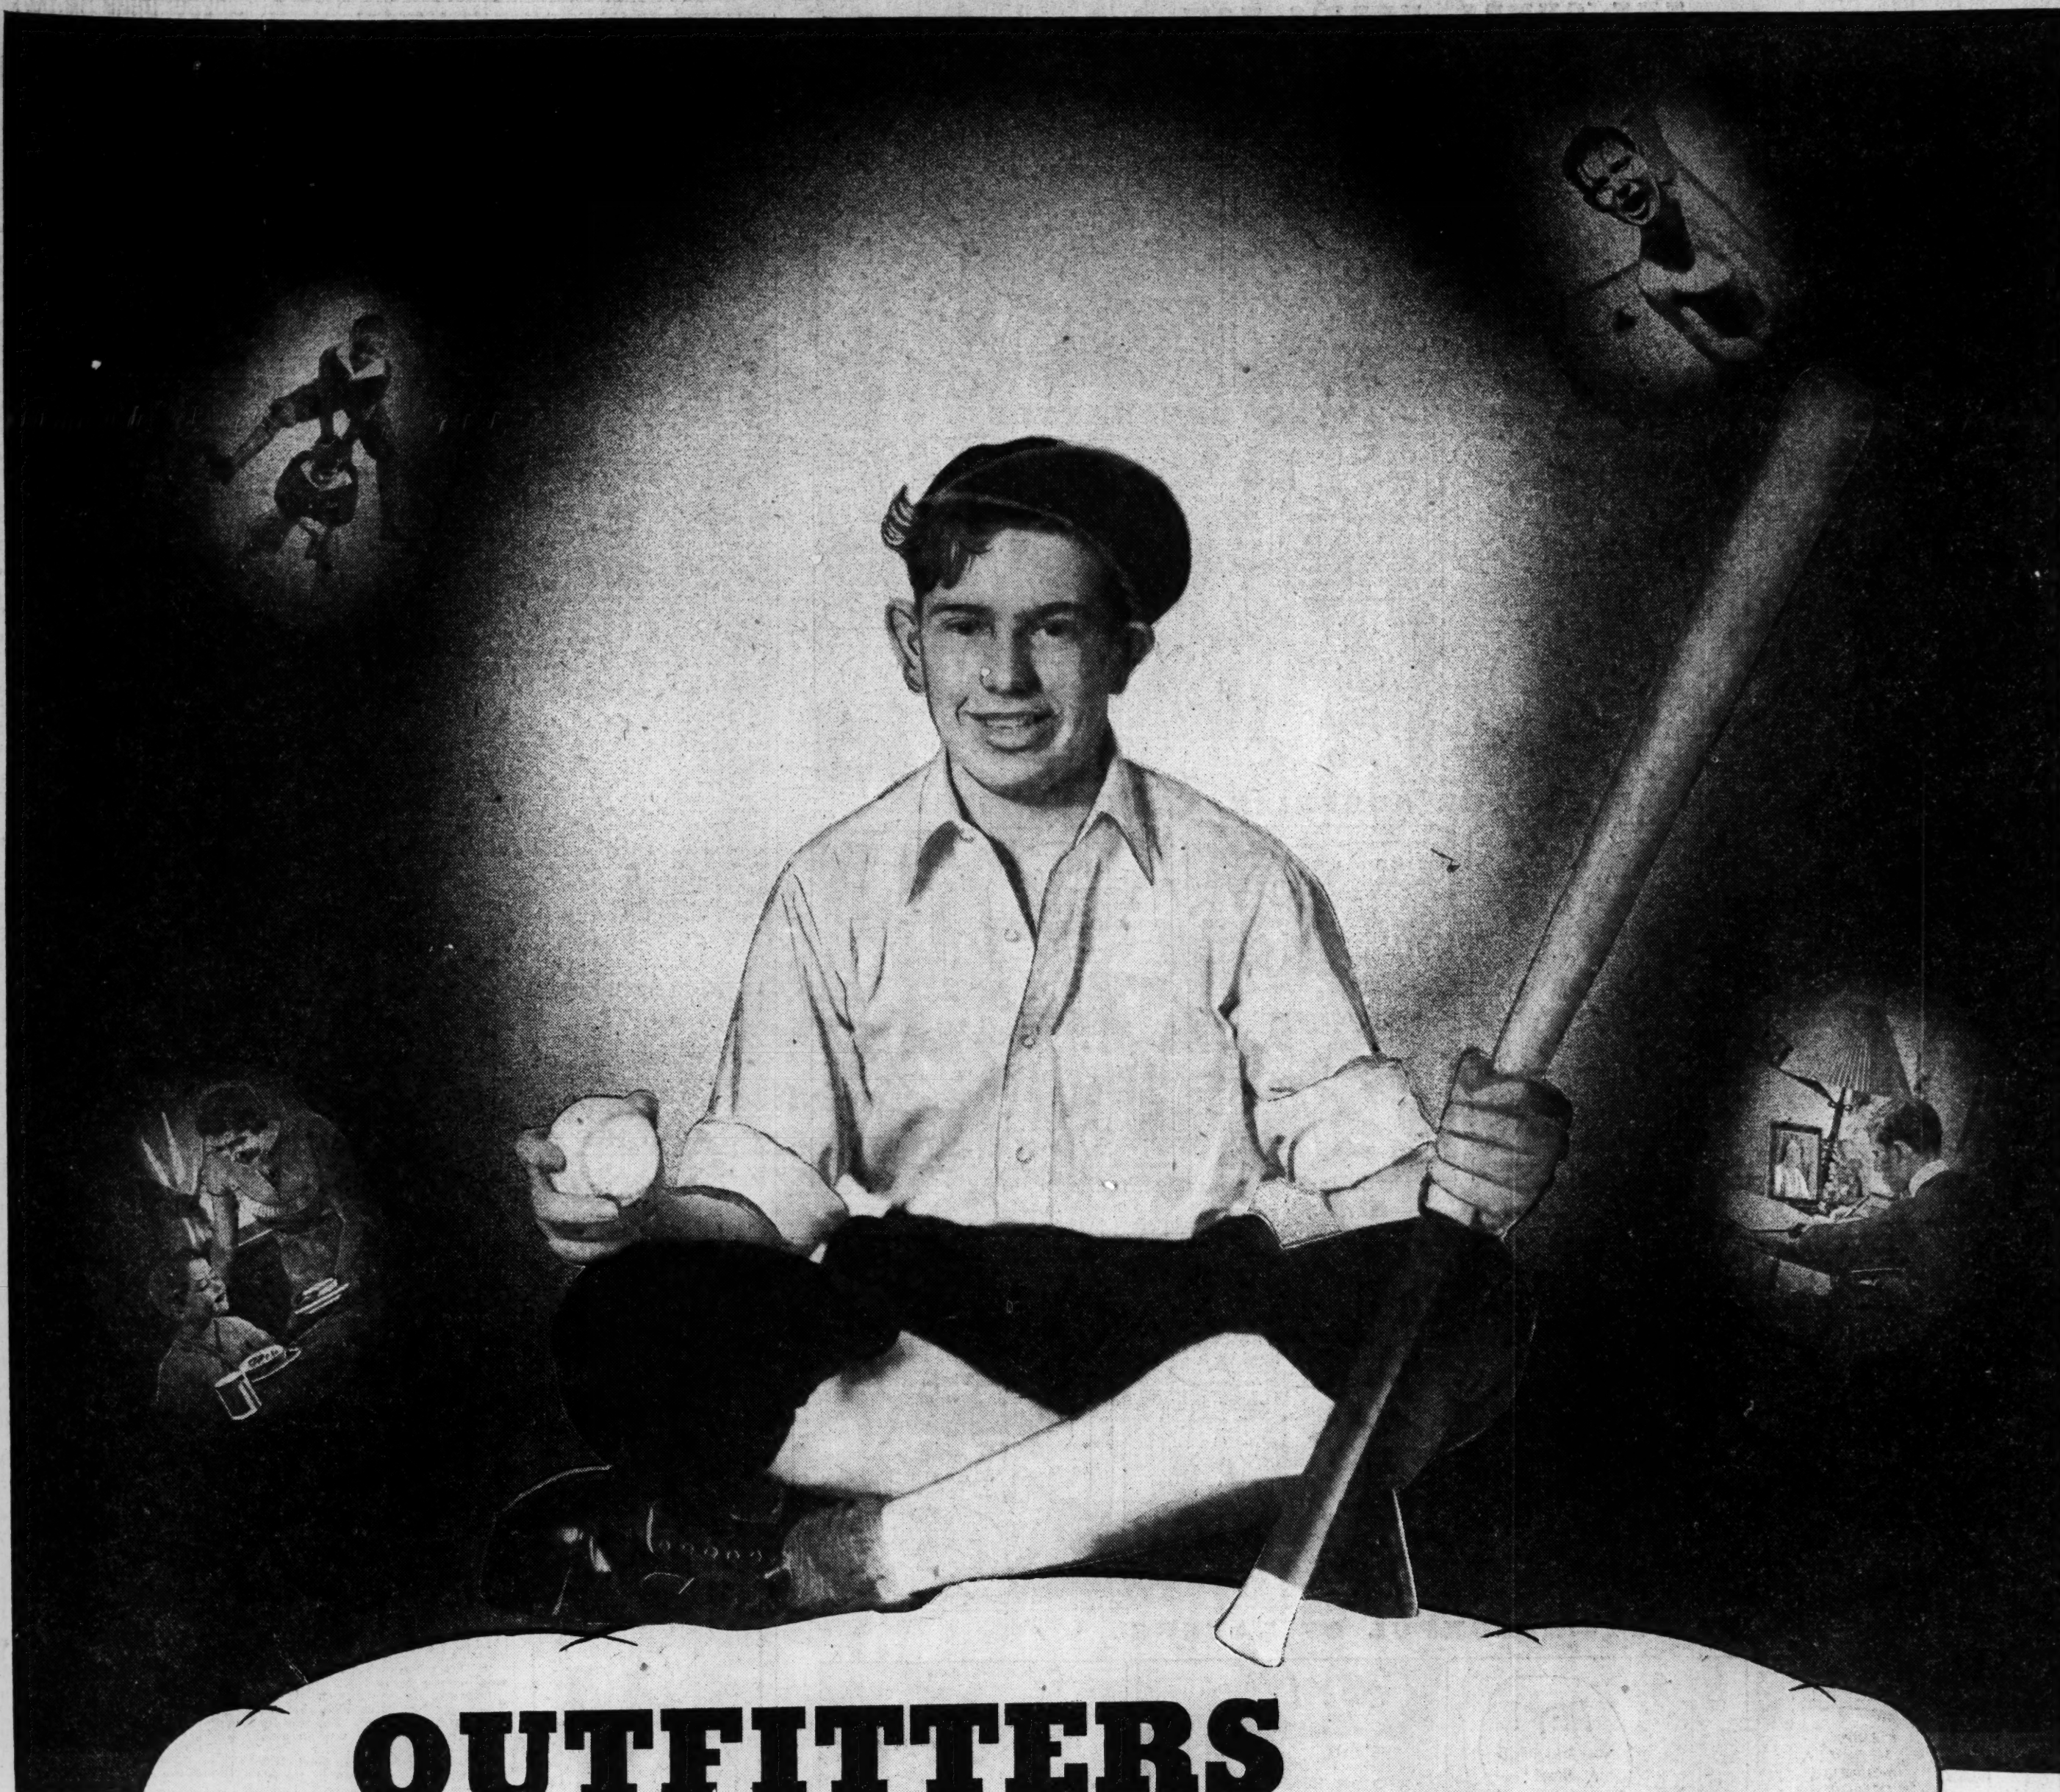

After the face is cleansed with this rose-scented cream, remove it with tissues but be sure, especially if you have a dry skin, to apply a heavier massaging cream afterward. The manufacturer tells you that all you have to do is to use this and then use a skin freshener, but after trying it I disagree with him. That would be all right for a very oily skin but not for a dry one.

My advice is, use this as a cleanser, then use any good massaging cream that you happen to have—after that, a mild skin tonic (have it very cold) and always use a foundation cream before applying makeup. I have yet to see this rule fail to keep makeup in place.

Next see that your face is one of the most important things in building up a fine complexion. The thing I want to bring home to you today is that this light oil cream which liquefies is one of the very best of cleansers.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone Mignon at The Constitution. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

INSTALLMENT XXVIII.

Bois Joli. Eleven o'clock in the morning. Anne arranged magazines on a table in Madame Hoag's circular boudoir. Madame Hoag, in the worn purple dressing gown retrieved from her husband's wardrobe, her hair a red riot about her massive head, her face masked with cold cream, began her third cup of black coffee.

"Now you look here, Fifi," Madame commanded. "Don't you pay no attention to that business about the pearls. It's easy enough to get another string of pearls, but when you get some one who knows more about clothes than a duchess, you get something. Besides, I don't believe you had anything to do with them getting lost. Just you pay attention to the nut throat servants bothering you, let me know. I'll take care of 'em."

Madame's jaws snapped ominously. "Thank you, Madame," Anne said. Her eyes were damp with gratitude. "I'm moving you to a room up here in the front of the house, so you'll be nearer me when I want you." Madame went on. "You're to wear your own clothes—never mind the uniform. If you need any new carpet rags, go to one of the shops where I trade and get 'em. Charge 'em to me. It's part of the expense."

"That's kind of you," Anne wondered if she could keep the tears from spilling over. "I think I can manage for the present—on what clothes I have."

"All right. Only don't go short. I like folks around me to look peaky and to be perky. But I'll show you where your new room is. Come back in an hour."

The new room was down the hall from Madame's suite. It was large and sunny with an alcove of long French windows opening onto a balcony large enough to accommodate several wicker chairs, a chaise longue and stone jars of growing plants.

"Are you sure this is the room Madame means me to have?" Anne asked. Obviously this was a guest room with its bath of sea-green tile perfectly appointed.

"This is it," Bats peered into a cedar-lined closet. "I couldn't believe it myself at first when she told me, so I asked her again to be sure, and it made her mad as all get out. She shouted I wasn't to be poking my nose on other folks' business."

"It's quite grand," Anne said, "but I'll miss being next to you. You must be in whenever you can and help me enjoy it. We can have fine sun baths on the balcony."

"The blue car is waiting. As she descended the steps, Anne was aware of a blue uniform figure hurrying behind the driving wheel.

"Anna?" Now was the time. Never mind the simulated joy in that word. "Anna." Never mind the blue figure poised for flight toward her. Theatricals! Carl Case had the effrontery, now that she was out of the shadows, to think that their little affair could carry on from where it had been left off.

Her eyes stopped him, brought him to attention. They were dark pools under ice.

"Take me downtown, please," she said, adding the name of a fashionable hotel.

Instantly he was at the back door of the car, standing at attention to hand her in. She dared not look at him. The line of his jaw, she knew, would be tense and jutting. He would resent the supercilious tone in her order. She wanted him to resent it. She wanted to be as hateful as she could possibly manage. He must be made to understand that she regarded him as a totally negligible quantity, that for her he had ceased to exist save as a part of Bois Joli's household service.

Now she was being whirled along the Shore drive, into traffic. Carl Case was certainly stepping on the gas. He was trying to frighten her. She placed her lips close to the speaking table.

"Thirty miles an hour, please," she said, clipping her words.

Instantly the car slowed. It had volplaned. Now it crawled. He was trying to infuriate her. The blue figure in the seat ahead was an automaton.

The car stopped at the hotel. How often she had come here in the old days—or was it in another life? Carl Case was at the back door of the car. He had opened it. He stood, wooden and white as the man she ever had seen waiting to hand her out. She ignored the proffered hand, stepped from the car with maddening deliberation.

"Wait for me, please," she said, over her shoulder.

All the time she was making her purchases for Madame in the beauty shop she was conscious of a blue car and a blue figure waiting out-

Bats shook her head. "It's different now, Miss Anne," she said.

Anne stopped arranging clothes in the cedar closet, turned and came to where Bats stood rather forlornly, still shaking her head.

"Why is it different?" Anne demanded, "and why do you call me Miss Anne?"

"Madame has given orders you're to be called Miss Anne and that you belong to the front of the house, not back-stairs. You should have seen that Berta when word came you are to be served here in your room instead of at the table with the rest of us. I thought that Berta was going to have a stroke she got so purple. She's been stomping around muttering to herself ever since. Don't you let that one serve you, Miss Anne. She'll like as not put poison in your victuals."

Anne laughed. "We'd better be getting back to Madame," she said.

Madame was in a pet about her cold cream mask.

"Cream?" she raged, scornfully. "They call it cream. Mutton tallow! That's what they sell me, tallow by the carat. I know the difference between old and young, but these beauty doctors ought to be able to make me look human. Anyway, half human. I've ordered the car, Fifi. You go to the best beauty doctor in this town and get me something besides mutton tallow. Get me everything he's got. I've cleared out the cupboard and the dresser. Throw out all the bottles and pots and boxes. I'm gonna get a fresh start on this face of mine."

The car! Anne's heart stood still, then raced, clamoring at her throat. Madame's blue car? Carl Case at the wheel? How was she to meet Carl Case? How greet him? Now she knew why she had returned to Bois Joli. To meet Carl Case. To let him see how little a coward and a cheat could touch her life. As Madame's secretary, the chauffeur would be required to take her orders. "Are there other errands I can attend to while I'm downtown?" Anne asked. Madame would be giving orders was going to be sweet to her today.

"Yes. Get me a couple of pairs of beach pajamas and some sun hats. Take 'em to the Short Club and wait for me in my cabana."

Anne walked down the broad steps under Bois Joli's porte-cochere. In war years she was a whirl of emotions. Pride rode high but her knees were not too steady. Anyone observing her would have said that here was a very cool and a very efficient young person, very lovely, too, preoccupied by whatever it was she was about to do.

The blue car was waiting. As she descended the steps, Anne was aware of a blue uniform figure hurrying behind the driving wheel.

"Anna?" Now was the time. Never mind the simulated joy in that word. "Anna." Never mind the blue figure poised for flight toward her. Theatricals! Carl Case had the effrontery, now that she was out of the shadows, to think that their little affair could carry on from where it had been left off.

Her eyes stopped him, brought him to attention. They were dark pools under ice.

"Take me downtown, please," she said, adding the name of a fashionable hotel.

Instantly he was at the back door of the car, standing at attention to hand her in. She dared not look at him. The line of his jaw, she knew, would be tense and jutting. He would resent the supercilious tone in her order. She wanted him to resent it. She wanted to be as hateful as she could possibly manage. He must be made to understand that she regarded him as a totally negligible quantity, that for her he had ceased to exist save as a part of Bois Joli's household service.

Now she was being whirled along the Shore drive, into traffic. Carl Case was certainly stepping on the gas. He was trying to frighten her. She placed her lips close to the speaking table.

"Thirty miles an hour, please," she said, clipping her words.

Instantly the car slowed. It had volplaned. Now it crawled. He was trying to infuriate her. The blue figure in the seat ahead was an automaton.

The car stopped at the hotel. How often she had come here in the old days—or was it in another life? Carl Case was at the back door of the car. He had opened it. He stood, wooden and white as the man she ever had seen waiting to hand her out. She ignored the proffered hand, stepped from the car with maddening deliberation.

"Wait for me, please," she said, over her shoulder.

All the time she was making her purchases for Madame in the beauty shop she was conscious of a blue car and a blue figure waiting outside for her pleasure, her order. Let them wait.

When Anne finished her shopping, which included a bathing suit for Madame, she had an attendant carry her purchases to the blue car.

"Stow them in the back seat, please," she instructed the attendant when the car drew up. "I'll have the chauffeur look after them."

"Carl Case heard. He could not help hearing."

"Where to, Miss Brent?" The blue figure stood, stiffly, still at attention.

"To the Surf Club." Anne leaned back against the cushions of the blue car. She was tired, desperately tired. Was she tired or she fed up? The old camaraderie of the front seat—the hum of the motor under her feet—the touch of dear lips against her cheek—that too was millions of years ago! The world went on crashing. No yesterday. Only today, and tomorrow—maybe.

The car stopped. The familiar Surf Club. Glimt and glinten and high voices of the old coloring. Spurs togs. Laughter, with and without mirth.

"You may look after the packages, Case," Anne said. Her tongue tripped, ever so little, over the word "Case." Why couldn't she be happy gloating over her ability to hurt this man who had wounded her so deeply? "You are to wait, please, here at the club. Madame will give orders when she arrives."

Anne proceeded along the familiar entrance to the club. She must be nonchalant, she told herself. No matter how much she wanted to flee, to be out of sight of the blue-clad figure, the blue car, she must be leisurely. Even though her heart was being squeezed. Even though she felt small and mean, more hateful even than she had hoped she might be.

She had the number of Madame's cabana. She'd skirt the club to the beach. It might be her good luck to meet no one she knew. If she did meet a friend, an acquaintance of the old days, she would be as curt as politeness permitted. She was here in the interests of her employer. That would answer their questions. Madame's cabana was the most luxurious on the beach. A butler in horizon blue uniform was arranging a table on the deep cushioned piazza.

"I am Madame's Hoag's secretary," she said, forcing herself not to select a secluded chair. She had never seen this butler before. He was not one of the house staff at Bois Joli.

"Very good, Miss. The butler went on with his table."

"There are no guests?"

"My orders are for two, Miss. Madame will lunch in the cabana. Two? Madame and—and—she was the other one. She was expected to lunch with Madame. Here, within sight of the parade—the parade of fashion and frivolity, the parade that strolled to see and to be seen. There was no chance that she would escape recognized by some of those avid-eyed strollers. Why should she seek to? There were no apologies as they lifted their eyebrows.

She could hear the butler being champagne somewhere inside the cabana. She could hear the booming of madame Hoag's heels.

Anne heard the booming of madame Hoag's heels.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Farber, Ph.D.

A TIRED PERSON DOES NOT SLEEP AS WELL AS ONE WHO IS RESTED

Many popular beliefs regarding sleep have been based on nothing but sentiment, and are crumbling under the strict investigation of science. By actual tests with measuring instruments, it has been found that fatigue reduces the soundness of one's sleep, and that the more tired a person is, the less sound he sleeps. Even the theory that sleep is helped by exercise before going to bed, has been exploded. A rested person nearly always sleeps best.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

OIL FROM THE EARTH.
—Wells of Petroleum.

Oil has been obtained from many kinds of plants and animals. Whales, seals, salmon, sardines, herrings and sturgeons are among the water animals which have been used for oil; and the fat of some land animals has supplied oil.

Another theory is that the crude oil was made when two gases—hydrogen and carbon—were pressed together under great heat.

Whatever is the fact about the beginning of the oil, it is found in hundreds of places between layers of rocks. Often there is much gas around it, and when a well is drilled the gas may rise through the hole and bring the oil up with it. That is the "gusher" type of well.

There is likely to be salt water just under the oil. Crude oil is not so heavy as water.

People knew about petroleum in ancient times. Herodotus, the Greek writer, declared "I have seen pitch drawn out of a lake."

People around the Caspian sea gave worship to "the holy fires of Baku." The fires were fed with oil which rose to the surface of the ground.

North American Indians obtained oil from petroleum springs, and white settlers called it "Seneca oil." From Indians, the whites gained the idea that this was of value for health if rubbed over the body. In some towns it was sold in drug stores.

We hear of men obtaining Seneca oil from the Oil Creek region of Pennsylvania and taking it to Pittsburgh. More than a century ago Nathaniel Cary gained notice as a trader in Seneca oil.

Prominent Atlantans Sail Friday On Land of Midnight Sun Cruise

By Sally Forth.

ATLANTANS cannot watch travelers go up the gangplanks of ocean liners, but they can get an idea of the pleasures awaiting them at the various informal gatherings these June days, as the main topic of conversation is travel. Last week, the current chatter revolved around the cruise to Norway upon which many prominent Atlantans have booked passage. They said at midnight next Friday aboard the S. S. Kungsholm. To date Sally has heard that among the Atlanta passengers will be Miss Natalie Hammond, Mrs. Fannie Durand Williams, Mrs. James E. Hickey Sr., Mr. and Mrs. James M. Tull, Miss Marjorie Weldon, Mrs. Oscar Elsas, Mrs. Ben Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Bulow Campbell, Judge and Mrs. Price Gilbert and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Woodruff.

When the mighty Kungsholm noses out of New York harbor she will be headed for a cruise which offers many other enchanting inducements in addition to the famous fjords of Norway, the stupendous miracle of the midnight sun, and the venturing into the arctic circle. They will visit Hammerfest, the most northerly city in the world; the North Cape, the Svalbard glacier, the third largest in the world; then through the northern country, into Russia and central Europe before returning to America in the late summer.

Most of the aforementioned Atlantans have already left for New York to enjoy a few days there before sailing. Marjorie Weldon left yesterday and will join her aunt, Mrs. J. B. Chesnut, of Savannah, with whom she is making the cruise. They will spend this week in Douglas, Long Island, N. Y., with their cousin and niece, Mrs. Elbert Jackson, and her family.

Marjorie has tucked away in her bag a letter if introduction to Oadjeia Petrovna Porohovshikova, in Leningrad, Russia, given her by the late Dr. Dr. Petrov Porohovshikoff, of Atlanta. The letter to Marjorie was accompanied by a note from "Dr. Peter," in which he said in part: "Would you take with you two packages of American cigarettes and open them before entering Leningrad and make a present of them to my mama?" Dr. Peter is no win New York and will be among the many gathered at Pier 97 on next Friday to bid "bon voyage" to the Atlanta passengers.

NO MATTER what the season nor the weather, visitors always claim the interest of society. Incident to the foregoing is the news that Flora Bewick Wright sails from Southampton on June 29, and arrives in Atlanta the day thereafter.

As you already know, Flora is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Edward T. Donnelly, whom she will visit at her Peachtree road residence. She will voyage across the ocean for the express purpose of spending a fortnight with her mother, and to satisfy the deep yearning to see Mrs. Donnelly.

It has been more than a year since her relatives and friends have glimpsed this attractive woman, who was last seen at her home here. Ever since her marriage to General Wright she has lived in England, within a short motor ride of London.

PERHAPS the sportiest and swiftest of the new craft at Sea Island Beach is the new streamlined and sleek new Hacker Craft speedboat. Containing three comfortable cockpits, this boat is a delight to the eye in addition to furnishing plenty of thrills when cruising at 50 miles per hour.

Rufus King with his blonde wife, the former Dot Hair, take frequent jaunts in the new boat which has been christened, "Dad," and young Mrs. King has outfitted it with anchors and stars, which she wears to advantage. Of course Jack King, the youngest son of the household, spends much of his time taking large groups of the sublimely and younger set on the island for rides.

Judy King, niece of DeWitt King, with her guest, Peggy Gude, spends quite a lot of time cruising about in her trim and gleaming G. Wood speedboat, which vies with her uncle's boat for the admiration of visitors at the Yacht Club dock.

"The Teenie," John Smith's speedboat, makes frequent pleasure trips, and its generous owner invites friends frequently to enjoy rides. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have at their guest, a most attractive home on the beach. Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen, of Atlanta, Mr. Allen, who is chairman of the board of the Federal Home Loan Bank, of Winston-Salem, was listed among prominent speakers at the recent convention of the Georgia Building and Loan League held at The Cloister. Among other recent additions to the group of Atlantans constantly in attendance at the water sports programs and daily concerts at the Casino pool are Mr. and Mrs. Preston Stevens and their young son, Preston Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. William Oden with their young son, Miss Betty Yopp arrived during the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald P. O'Keefe, who have taken a cottage for a month, and she and her guests, Misses Nancy Calhoun and Elizabeth Fuller, never miss a day at the pool.

Social Activities In Decatur, Ga.

Mrs. Walter Brice, of Spartanburg, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Brice last week.

Mrs. Robert Ramspeck and daughter, Miss Dorothy and Evelyn Lynn, arrived last week from Washington, D. C., to spend the summer here.

Miss Laura West, of Thomson, spent the week-end with Miss Myra O'Neal.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy Padgett and Mr. and Mrs. Hal Padgett spent the week-end at St. Simons.

Miss Mary Margaret Steve, of Belmont, N. C., arrived Saturday to visit Miss Myra O'Neal.

Mrs. Marion Moore was hostess Thursday entertaining the members of her bridge club.

Miss Katie Hazel Houston, of Valhalla, is visiting her mother, Mrs. W. J. Houston.

Mrs. C. A. Murphy is spending a week with her sister in Smyth.

Miss Emma Davis, of Meigs, Ga., and Miss Elvora Dyer, of Cross Hill, S. C., are visiting Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Allen at their home on Angier avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. David E. Clark, of San Bernardino, Cal., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hogg, Jr., at their home on Bellevue drive.

Miss Carolyn Breeding and Miss Anna Ruth Burton of Monticello, Ky., arrived Thursday to be the guests of Miss Gladys Carr at her home on Houston Hill road.

Mrs. Drury Powers is recovering from a recent fall at her home on Peachtree circle.

Mrs. Harry Ross will leave this week for a summer's vacation in Maine and Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Fay Ellis and her daughter, Jean, returned Friday from several weeks' stay in Panama City, Fla., and Troy, Ala.

Mrs. Marguerite Wood, of Dothan, Ala., is spending the week-end with Mrs. C. B. Ellis.

Master Aubrey Redmond, of Montgomery, Ala., is visiting Mrs. Charles B. Ellis.

Mrs. J. J. Montgomery sails on June 30 for a trip abroad.

Miss Mary Alice Roan is spending her vacation with relatives in Athens.

Miss Lucy Goss sailed Saturday with a party of friends from New York for a two-weeks' cruise to Bermuda.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McLamb and Mr. and Mrs. George West are at Sea Island Beach.

Miss Nan G. duBignon is at the Hotel New Weston in New York.

Miss Janie Mae Orr, Miss Jean Shirley and Mrs. Joe Lewis have returned from Jacksonville, Daytona Beach, Miami, and other points, in Florida.

Miss Brown Weds Walter Sheffield In Sandersville, Ga.

SANDERSVILLE, Ga., June 23. The marriage of Miss Callie Stedman Brown to Walter Sheffield, of Atlanta, formerly of Savannah, took place Wednesday at the historic home of the bride's mother here. The beautiful old home was decorated with summer garden flowers.

A musical program was rendered by Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, pianist, and Mrs. B. L. Helton, soprano. The tapers were lighted by Phil Adams Jr., and little Hal Brown served as ring-bearer. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, R. M. Brown, and had as her only attendant her sister, Mrs. Baron Oxner, of Batesburg, S. C. Lawrence Sheffield, of Savannah, acted as Mr. Sheffield's best man.

The bride was lovely in her bridal ensemble of white satin made on tailored lines with cowl neck and train. Her veil of tulle was worn coronet style and caught with orange blossoms. She carried a handkerchief of old lace which had belonged to her grandmother. Her bouquet was of white calla lilies and valley lilies. The matron of honor was attired in pink chiffon made with short shirred cape, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held and a buffet lunch served. Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield left for Savannah, where they boarded the S. S. City of Birmingham for a trip to New York and Boston. Upon their return they will make their home in Atlanta.

Miss Sheffield graduated from high school in Sandersville and later attended State Normal in Athens. Mr. Sheffield is a graduate of Savannah High school and after moving to Atlanta attended the University of Georgia Evening school. He is connected with the Southeastern Express Company.

Activities Planned By Jewish Alliance.

Summer activities at the Jewish Educational Alliance include a play school for children from 3 to 5 years old; a vacation club for the older boys and girls, and a camp for Jewish Girl Scouts at Camp Civitania during the month of August.

The play school meets each morning from 10 to 12 o'clock with a program of play, stories, music and rhythm. The vacation club meets every afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock with a variety of activities, including trips, picnics, dramas, games, crafts, folk dancing and baseball.

The Alliance girls' camp will be conducted at Camp Civitania, the property of the Atlanta Girl Scouts, for Jewish Girl Scouts from August 6 to September 1. Boys and girls interested in joining the Alliance summer activities are requested to register now.

Lillian Mae Pattern

The flattering shirtwaist style is so popular and prevalent one might suspect the danger of monotony until Lillian Mae shows you how to "do things" with it! Study pattern 2338, see how perfectly simple it is to make; yet what a lot of diversified interest is achieved with clever handling of the stripes. The simple yoke-sleeve (that may be shorter as in the back view) continues down into the bodice forming a pleasing contrast. Cross-cut pockets perform the same interesting trick on the vertically striped skirt. Still another optional feature is the trim collar sketched on small view. Choose striped shirting, silk or seersucker.

Pattern 2338 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 3 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send 15 cents (15c) for this Lillian Mae pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. Be sure to state size.

Lillian Mae summer pattern book should be in every home! Its 40 fascinating pages are full of fashion facts every woman wants to know! ## Program of Week's Activities Announced by Camp Highland Highlights of the week at Camp Highland, the Y. W. C. A. camp, will be entertainment of the board of directors this afternoon; a moonlight sail on the lake; a tennis tournament Wednesday and throughout the week there will be organization of new classes and hobby groups.

Mrs. Luther Rosser, president, and Mrs. Hal Hentz, chairman of camp committee, invite board and committee members to visit Highland this afternoon and to enjoy a supper party with the campers. The business session of the board will be held at 4:30 o'clock, with reports from chairmen. This evening impromptu stunts, a fashion show, songs and dances will entertain the visitors.

Tomorrow evening campers will follow a moonlight trail over the Nickajack creek, across the highest hill and join hands around the campfire to sing favorite numbers. Wednesday evening Miss Cecilia Agnew's new class in dramatics will present a gala first-night performance. Wednesday afternoon will be known as "Sports special," with Miss Sara Lawrence and Miss Mildred McMillen, of Clearwater, Fla., featured in a tennis tournament, followed by a swimming meet staged by Miss Elizabeth Burson and Miss Jeanne Matthews.

As new camp weeks begin on Thursday, these evenings are devoted to get-acquainted parties, when new arrivals are introduced. Shack Row blossoms forth on Friday evenings, when the occupants of each shack compete for the best stunt presented in "Ree hall." Saturday evenings there will be informal dances. During the day class periods are held, with instruction given in nature lore; soil and tap dancing; tennis, swimming, dramatics, archery, music. Miss Frances Wilson, assisted by Miss Julia West, is teaching the handicraft group how to weave pocket books, paint tapestries, make bracelets, leathercraft, raffia weaving and other novelties. A special hobby group hour is held for the young children, when a contest in first aid is offered for senior counselors.

Junior assistants who will serve the first two weeks are Ruth Ely, Mary Kate Burruss, Louise Sullivan and Julia West. Many out-of-town guests have registered and included in the first list are: Miss Betty Lee, Clearwater, Fla.; Misses Virginia Wallace, Margaret Brooks, Anne Joiner, Doris Elaine Williams, Betty Heard, Martha and Virginia Hudson, Palmerton; Miss Elizabeth Richmond, Martin, Brunswick; Miss Foss Harris, Miss Bunice Powers, Dublin; Miss Beatrice Powers, Louisville; Misses Doris Smolton, Margaret Shaw, Hilda Mullins, Florence Fesperman, Mary Hubbard Todd, Laura Perry, Ruby Elison, Bernice Clark and Mrs. A. N. Canon—Story.

CLAYTON, Ga., June 23. — The marriage of Miss Mildred Cannon to Alton Story, formerly of Concord, was solemnized Sunday at the Blue Ridge hotel, the home of the bride. Rev. Donald De Harris performed the ceremony.

The lovely bride was given in marriage by her brother, Horace Cannon. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Robert Hancock. The bride's brunette beauty was enhanced by a becoming white crepe gown and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of sweet peas, orange blossoms and roses.

Mrs. Story is the daughter of Mrs. Calla Cannon, of Clayton, and the late J. H. Cannon Sr., pioneer merchant of north Georgia. Her sisters are Mrs. Icie McCurry, Mrs. "Lauda" Stone, Cypher, Cleo and Carrie Belle Cannon.

Dunaway-Hatchett Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne P. Sewell announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Marjorie Dunaway, to Hammond Durwood Hatchett, of Bremen, the ceremony having taken place Thursday evening, June 13, with the Rev. B. F. Frasier officiating in the presence of a few close friends.

Mrs. Hatchett has made her home in Atlanta with her aunt, Mrs. Wayne P. Sewell, for the past few years, where she has been the head director of the Wayne P. Sewell Producing Company. She was educated in Boston and New York, having graduated from the Emerson College of Oratory and the Academy of Speech Arts. She studied Russian ballet with Senia Kusunoff and musical comedy dancing with Ned Wayburn.

Before coming to Atlanta, Mrs. Hatchett had several successful seasons on the American stage, playing with such stars as Alice Brady, Frederick G. Lewis, Joseph Selman, Alma Baker, Thayer Roberts and Jennette Dowling. Last season she toured the east with the Caravan Players in classical productions of "The Taming of the Shrew," "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" and "Tartuffe" and "The Merchant of Venice." She is the daughter of Mrs. Frances Dunaway Goodman, noted landscape and portrait artist of Los Angeles, Cal., whose paintings of Maguelli Gardens and the desert scenes of California have caused favorable comment from critics over the country.

Mr. Hatchett is the son of Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Hatchett, of Raleigh, N. C., and the nephew of Colonel and Mrs. J. Frank Hatchett and brother of Colonel J. B. Hatchett, both of Greenville, Ga. He was graduated from Mercer University and has been associated with the public school system of Georgia for ten years, having been superintendent of the schools at Bremen for the past seven years. Following a brief wedding trip to Savannah and Brunswick, Mr. and Mrs. Hatchett spent a few days in the honeymoon cottage at the Hettie Jane Dunaway gardens located near Newnan. They reside in Bremen.

PARTICULARLY SLIMMING FOR HEAVIER FIGURES.

Here's something fresh and cool in dark sheer cotton print for town. And it's just the thing for summer travel.

Note the becoming rever collar that terminates in a jabot that falls so softly and gracefully and cuts undue bodice breadth. The seaming at the front of the skirt creates a narrow front panel effect, that's decidedly length giving.

Tulle, silk and linens are also suitable for this easy to make model.

Style No. 557 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inch bust. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with 3-8 yard of 39-inch contrasting.

Our Spring Fashion Book is beautifully illustrated in color.

Price of BOOK 15 cents. Price of PATTERN 15 cents. Wrap order carefully.

Miss Hill and Mr. Barton Wed At Church Rites in West End

The Church of the Incarnation in West End was the scene of the beautiful ceremony Saturday afternoon when Miss Martha Wade Hill became the bride of a Vancie Lindsay Barton. Rev. G. W. Gasque performed the ceremony.

In the church a profusion of palms and greenery formed a background for the tall pedestals of pink and white flowers. On the altar were white burning tapers and vases filled with garden flowers. Miss Maude Eberhart rendered a program of nuptial music.

Miss Lucile Allen, of Detroit, Mich., was maid of honor. She wore an all-white gown of tulle and carried a small net (at. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses combined with pastel garden flowers. Little Barbara Barker, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, and wore a pink net dress. She carried a basket of rose petals.

Entering with her brother, Thomas Lee Hill, who gave her in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man.

Ralph McElroy. The bride was a lovely figure in an afternoon dress of white tulle, with long full sleeves and a skirt of floor length. She wore a picture hat of white horsehair braid, and carried a bouquet of pink roses showered with valley lilies.

Mrs. John C. Hill, mother of the bride, wore flowered chiffon with white accessories. Mrs. A. R. Hill, Mrs. C. O. Colston and Mrs. Harry B. Hill, sisters of the bride, were gown in afternoon dresses of pastel shades with accessories to match.

Atlantic Ice & Coal Company Warns of Impending Early Price Advance

USERS ARE URGED TO SUPPLY NEEDS
AT PRESENT COST

Nine Yards Insure Immediate Delivery of Any Size Order; Quality, "Cleanliness" Assured.

Firmly believing that "a word to the wise is sufficient," officials of the Atlantic Ice & Coal Company Saturday issued a warning to coal users to avail themselves of prevailing low prices, in view of a virtually certain advance in prices by July 1 or shortly thereafter.

The coming week, they asserted, presents possibly the last opportunity of the year to take advantage of present prices, since within a few days it is predicted dealers will have to pay more at the mines. Thus, they declare, those who buy now will make purchases much to their economic advantage.

Of the thousands of coal users in the Atlanta area, it was stated, many hundreds in past years have pursued a course of buying only when the need arises. The folly of this practice is clearly seen when winter prices are compared with those prevailing during the previous summer months. This year, this week, in fact, presents to all an opportunity to lay in next winter's coal supply at a distinct saving, and the buyer with an eye for home maintenance expense will buy wisely if he takes advantage of the prevailing summer prices.

The Atlantic Ice & Coal Company, one of the largest institutions of its kind in the south, maintains nine yards in the Atlanta area. All so strategically situated that on is within a mile or two of any section of the city or its suburban areas.

The company operates a fleet of efficiently manned trucks, and is in position to make immediate delivery on orders of any quantity. At each of

Representatives of Baxter Maddox Agency Will Leave Today for National Convention

Members of the Baxter Maddox Agency of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company who will leave today for the company's national convention at Virginia Beach, Va.: Standing, left to right, M. L. Harper, supervisor, Atlanta; Paul L. Byrley, Atlanta; George D. Bell, Tignall, Ga.; B. L. Hollis, Crawfordville, Ga.; and Albert H. Erwin Jr., Atlanta. Seated, left to right, Nicholas Andronovitch, Mrs. Emaline Neilson, N. Baxter Maddox, general agent; Miss Carrie Lee Waddell and Edgar J. Strauss, all of Atlanta.

Twelve leading agents of the Baxter Maddox Agency, local representatives of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., leave today to attend the company's national convention to be held at the Cavalier hotel at Virginia Beach, Va.

Due to the enormous increase in business, the company will hold its largest convention, having more representatives in attendance than ever before during its 90 years of existence. On account of the large number in attendance, the convention will be held in two sections, the first on June 26, 27 and 28, at which half of the agents will be in attendance, and the second on July 1, 2 and 3 for the other representatives.

The group from Atlanta is the largest representation the company has ever had from the state of Georgia, and the local agency stands high in the ranks of the company's leaders. Mr. Maddox states the paid-for business of the local agency for the first five months of 1935 is 38 per cent greater than for the same period of 1934, which was a banner year; and further, that the paid-for life insurance during the month of May was the largest volume secured in Georgia in any month for many years.

Mr. Maddox has added several new agents to his personnel, and with the growth of his agency has recently enlarged his quarters by the addition of two new offices. Mr. Maddox further states that at present, he has an opening in his agency for one additional local representative.

B. L. Hollis, of Crawfordville, was second in the United States in the number of paid-for lives secured by any agent during the 15 months' qualification period. Mr. Hollis has had the honor of winning the president's trophy twice for being the company's leader in paid-for lives.

Saturday marked the close of the

TURNBULL CONES MUCH IN DEMAND, WALLACE STATES

Brower Candy Company Reports Line of Five Growing More Popular Among Retailers.

With the arrival of blistering summer weather and the consequently increasing demand for ice cream, retailers are learning in growing numbers the fallacy of the adage: "Any port in a storm."

Countless retailers who in recent years have depended upon "just any cone" are turning in daily increasing numbers to the Turnbull line of cones, for which the Brower Candy Company, 187-89 Edgewood avenue, is dealer and distributor.

The Brower Candy Company is prepared to serve ice cream manufacturers, jobbers and retailers in fulfilling their needs for Turnbull cones, which are five of the most popular numbers on the market. The Turnbull line, because of the company's scientific manufacturing and packing methods, guarantees to the retailer the utmost in freshness, crispness and flavor. The packing process insures perfect delivery, without breakage.

Topping the Turnbull line are the "Grand" and the "Baby Grand," which are designed, respectively, for No. 20, 16 or 12 dishes, and for No. 30, 24 or 20 dishes. The "Gold Leaf," another regulation shaped cone, is for No. 20 or 24 dishes, the "Royalty," designed to fit the 30-Hi cone dish, is for No. 30, 24 or 20 dishes, and the "Big Head," designed for "twin" cones, is for No. 30, 24 or 20 dishes.

The first four of these are packed 100 to a carton and 10 cartons to a case, while the last named comes 750 to a heavy corrugated carton. In addition, the highly popular "Baby Grand" is packed in the Turnbull guaranteed "Perfec-Pak" tin, which provides double assurance of lasting freshness.

The Brower Candy Company, in addition to cones, is headquarters for every kind of bar, novelty and penny candies. Among these, W. Wallace, president of the company, calls special attention to two numbers which are meeting with widespread popularity at present. The first of these are "Dum-Dums," the new pure fruit suckers, wrapped to retain their freshness and guaranteed under all weather conditions. Another increasingly popular number, Mr. Wallace points out, is the ambrosia and pineapple sucker. Both of these are penny suckers, which many retailers already have found to be in constant demand among children, and which, because of their purity and flavor, are quick to turn over.

MATTRESS REPAIR EFFECTIVELY DONE BY TRIO COMPANY

Householders Urged To Avail Selves of Speedy and Efficient Service on All Renovation Work.

Housewives who, during the spring moving and spring cleaning seasons, failed to put their mattresses in first-class order will do wisely to investigate the complete service offered during the summer months by the Trio Mattress Company, which maintains its shop at 638 Wells street, S. W., one block off Stewarts avenue.

This company, the oldest establishment of its kind in the city, specializes in the complete renovation, repair or manufacture of mattresses of all types and sizes. It also is prepared and equipped to convert cotton mattresses into innerspring construction mattresses at reasonable cost.

The Trio Mattress Company, headed by J. C. Meaders, whose father before him followed the same craft for many years, maintains a completely equipped shop where workmanship of the highest standards insures full satisfaction and utmost quality in every job, in accordance with the price to be paid.

Mr. Meaders states the company offers at all times a wide selection of materials, thus permitting a varied range of prices to fit any purse.

The company, upon request, will send a representative to the home, to furnish samples and cost estimates on any job, and completed work, when desired, may be delivered back to the home within 24 hours after being picked up.

Mr. Meaders points out that the Trio shop is prepared, in addition to its mattress work, to renovate all types of pillows, and to recover studio couches. For the latter work, the householder may select any of a wide assortment of materials.
